CLEAVELAND—CLEVELAND.

EXCERPTS FROM GENEALOGICAL RECORDS, SHOWING LINEAGE OF GENERAL MOSES CLEAVELAND.

This name, Cleveland, is beyond question of Saxon origin, and was borne by a landed family in Yorkshire, England, before the Norman conquest. The estate or district which bore the name was so called because of the clefts or cleves which abound there. From vol. VII, p. 153, of the Bibliotheca Topographia, title Clieveland, is taken the following extract: "This family is from Yorkshire, where they had considerable landed property in the North Riding, particularly in that district or tract of country lying near Gisburne and Whitby, called now Cleveland, but anciently as above, and from whence they derive the name. In early times, like that of all ancient families, their name was written with every possible variety of spelling, viz.: Cliveland, Clyveland, Clieveland, Cleiveland, Cleavland, Cleaveland, Clevland, Cleveland, and even Cleffland, Clifland, etc., etc. What has occurred concerning their early ancestors (who appear from their first names to have been of Anglo-Saxon and not of Norman descent), may be seen from the following: 'At the time of the Conquest lived Thorkil de Cliveland, and after him Uctred de Cliveland, who was succeeded by Robert de Cliveland, who had Robert de Cliveland of Ormsby, in the county of York, and Ralph de Cliveland. The last named Robert had Robert, who had John Cleveland, who, or his son John, was a flourishing citizen of the city of York in 1403. He dropped the "de" in his name. William Cleveland was sheriff of York in 1456. The Clevelands of Hinckley in Leicestershire, England, are his descendants.'"

Among others who have borne the name was Sir Guy de Cleveland, who was at the siege of Boulogne, in 1349, and was there knighted. He afterwards, in 1356, commanded the English spearmen at the battle of Poictiers. Mention may be made here of the poet, John Cleveland, b. 1613, who was a very distinguished writer, judge, and soldier in the time of Charles I. of England. He was born at Hinckley, Leicestershire, and was son of the learned minister there. He was a fellow of St. Johns, Christ Church College, for nine years, and "was the delight and ornament of the Society." His poems, epistles and addresses were much admired, and he was the recipient of many favors from King Charles I. He left Cambridge as the Puritans gained ground, and joined the king at Oxford. He was judge advocate of Newark soon after: "a just and prudent judge;" and at the siege drew up the gallant answer to the summons to surrender. He was made prisoner and was in confinement at Yarmouth for some months. His works were more admired in the seventeenth century than those of Milton. He was buried May 11, 1658, in the parish church of St. Michael Royal, on College Hill, London. Dr. Pearson, Lord Bishop of Chester, preached his funeral sermon. His works reached twenty editions.

An eminent antiquarian states that the Clevelands of America are descended from William Cleveland who removed from York to Hinckley, in Leicestershire, where he was buried, a very aged man, seventeenth January, 1630. His son Thomas became Vicar of Hinckley, was a graduate in 1603 (one of his sons was John, the poet, b. 1613.) He had a son Thomas, and another son Samuel, a younger brother; the latter apparently the father of Moses Cleveland, the emigrant to America in 1635.

Moses Cleveland, who died in Woburn, Mass., on the ninth day of January, 1701-2, appears to be the ancestor of all the Clevelands, or Cleavelands, in America who are of New England origin. According to an account given by one of his grandsons, he came to Massachusetts, in 1635, as an indentured apprentice to a housewright, from Ipswich, Suffolk County, England, remained a few years in Boston, and with Edward Winn and others founded the town of Woburn in 1640. He was made a freeman in 1643. A freeman was required to be of godly walk and conversation, to be at least twenty years of age, to take an oath of allegiance to the government of Massachusetts Bay Colony, to be worth £200, to hold office if elected, or pay a fine of forty shillings, and to vote at all elections, or pay the same fine. These restrictions and conditions were so onerous that many who were eligible preferred never to become freemen, being more free as they were. In 1642, the selectmen of Woburn appointed "land viewers," to view and set off a share of the public lands promised by the General Court to Moses Cleveland. So as early as 1642 he was a citizen. In 1663 the Woburn Militia Muster Roll gives his age as 39; so he was probably born 1623-4. His name is signed as a witness to a certificate of Thomas Dutton, a constable, that the people of Woburn refused to receive from him a circular letter from King Charles II., who sought to seduce the towns from their allegiance to the colony charter and government.

On the twenty-sixth of September, 1648, he married Anne Winn, daughter of Edward and Joanna Winn, of Woburn. Edward Winn, of Welsh descent, was a carpenter and joiner, and probably the master of Moses. He was a man of considerable reputation, and in the list of signers of "orders for Woburn, agreed upon by the commissioners at their first meeting, December 18, 1640," he spells his name Winne. He is the ancestor of the Winns of the United States and one of his descendants built and munificently endowed the handsome Library and Art Building which adorns the beautiful and ancient town of Woburn.

No. 8. Moses Cleveland of Woburn, Mass., 1641; said to have emigrated from Ipswich, Suffolk Co., Eng., 1635; an indentured apprentice to a housewright or master builder. Freeman, 1643. The number of his descendants is large. Dr. Parker Cleveland, once president of Bowdoin College at Brunswick, Me., descended through his son Samuel, his grandfather being that Rev. John Cleveland of Chebacco, who served as chaplain in the Colonial and Revolutionary wars, and a brother of the patriotic and self-denying Rev. Ebenezer Cleveland, of Gloucester. A son of Rev. John of Chebacco, also named John and a minister, held a lieutenant's commission in the Revolution. This line of the family was especially prolific of ministers. Isaac, son of Moses Cleveland, settled early at Norwich, Conn., and others of the family at Canterbury.

Chapter I.

MOSES[1] CLEVELAND OF WOBURN, MIDDLESEX COUNTY, MASSACHUSETTS, AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

MOSES[1] or MOYSES[1] CLEVELAND or CLEAVELAND, the common ancestor of all the Clevelands or Cleavelands of New England origin, came, when a youth, from Ipswich, Suffolk county, England. According to family tradition he sailed from London, Eng., and arrived in America in the year 1635. He first landed somewhere in Massachusetts, probably either at Plymouth, Plymouth co., or at Boston, Suffolk co., Mass.

Moses[1] Cleveland was born probably at Ipswich, Eng., about 1624 (according to court files of Woburn he was 39 years old in 1663), died at Woburn January 9, 1701–2, Maryed in Woburn y^{e} 26th : 7th m^{o}. [September] 1648 Ann Winn, born, according to family tradition, in Wales, or, according to another account, in England, about 1626, died probably at Woburn prior to May 6, 1682 (no record of dates and places of either her birth or death), a daughter of Edward and Joanna (———) Winn.

Children, all born at Woburn:

Records of Births, deaths and Maryages &c. for the toune of Woburne In the County of Midlesix in the Masathusets Colony In Nue England: from the yeer of our Lord Jesus Christ (1641). nota beer also yt the yeer begins on the first day of March Annualy:—

+9 JOSIAH³ CLEAVELAND Josyah borne y^e^ 26^th^ 12^th^ mo: 1666 [February 26, 1666–7].

+10 ISAAC² CLEVELAND borne y^e^: 11^th^ of 3^d^ month [May] 1669.

+11 JOANNA² CLEVELAND (again) borne 5^th^ of 2^d^ m° [April] 1670.

+12 ENOCH² CLEVELAND borne y^e^ 1^st^ of 6^th^ mo: [August] 1671.

MOSES¹ CLEVELAND arrived in this country, according to all accounts and traditions, about the year 1635, only fifteen years later than the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock, 1620. The following letter of inquiry, written from Ipswich, Essex co., Mass., by his great grandson, Rev. JOHN⁴ CLEAVELAND +233 (Josiah³, Josiah², Moses¹), to John Cleaveland +17805, explains the origin, occupation, etc., of Moses' Cleveland. The copy of this letter, as originally made and retained by the reverend gentleman himself, and in his hand-writing, has since become the property of one of the compilers. It is here given, verbatim et literatim:

"Sir: Being informed (by the Bearer, one Samuel Bates) of your Name and the Place of your abode, I supposed it highly probable that your are of the same Family that I sprang from. My Great Grand-father's name was MOSES CLEAVELAND, and came from Ipswich, in Suffolk. He was young when he came to New England, and was an apprentice to a joyner, and came with His Master. He settled in Woburn, near Boston, married, and had seven Sons, besides Daughters, and his sons all left Children, and all in New-England, of the Name are his Posterity, and all spell the Name as I do, tho' we are not certain that we spell it exactly as the same Family does in England. Because, as the said Moses was young when he left England and could not read and write if I am not misinformed. I have seen the Name spelt as I spell it in Books Printed in England but most commonly I find it spelt thus CLEVELAND or CLEVLAND, but as you are undoubtedly of y^e^ same Family, if These Lines should come to your Hands I should esteem it a Favour that you would write me, and give me some account of your Family. I am a Minister of y^e^ Gospel and Pastor of a Chh. in Ipswich in the county of Essex and Province of The Massachusetts Bay in New England. Excuse the Boldness and Freedom of your Humble servant and Unknown Friend

JOHN CLEAVELAND

Ipswich New-England Dec 25 1759

The superscription is as follows: "To Mr. John Cleaveland, Malster in Ipswich, in County of Suffolk, Living in Silent St., Near St. Clemence Church England" This letter was not answered; how appropriately the malster dwelt in Silent street.

Historical Collections of the Essex Institute, Salem, Essex co., Mass. IV: 267 — The Herrick Family, containing following in letter to George R. Curwen, dated Baltimore, Oct. 29, 1852, from Rev. Arthur Cleveland[7] Coxe (afterwards Bishop of Western N. Y.) +3258. "Facts always prove their own utility. I send annexed a fact which I find in my record book * * Henry Herrick a younger son of Sir William Herrick of Beau Manor Park, Loughboro' parish, co. Leicester Eng. went from Virginia to Salem and was there June 28 1653 as appears from a letter now at Beaumanor, addressed to his brother. With this Herrick and the Skipworths of Cotes Eng. went to America a CLEVELAND of Loughboro. The above communicated to me while in England 1851 by the Rev. HENRY[7] CLEVELAND, Vicar of Romaldkirk" [+2623.]

Some have thought that this CLEVELAND was MOYSES[1], and that he accompanied Herrick to New England. It may be that this was ALEXANDER[1] CLEVELAND +16001 of Virginia, or his ancestor. See CHAPTER II. The city records of Ipswich, Eng., show nothing concerning ancestry of Moses[1] Cleveland, but he was doubtless from that city or vicinity, where have dwelt Cleveland families from before 1635 to this day. (See CHAPTER III: MOSES CLEVELAND +17831, b. Ipswich, Eng., 1718.)

When Rev. Aaron[4] Cleveland +120 was in Eng., 1754–5, he found relations, among them Sir John Cleveland +17796 of the Navy Dep. [evidently identical with John[2] Cleveland +17795, Secretary to the Admiralty], a wealthy and noble gentleman, who welcomed to his residence his kinsman from America, and offered to provide for and educate the two eldest sons of Rev. Aaron[4] if they were sent to Eng. It would seem that this unusual hospitality and benefaction indicated the discovery of exact relationship. It is not impossible that Sir John was a great-gr. s. of a brother of Moses[1], and that they were 3d cousins to each other.

The name of Moses[1] Cleveland is not found on the custom house lists of passengers of London or other ports, nor on the Boston court lists. These lists, however, do not always agree, for many came secretly, not being willing to take the required oaths of allegiance to the government and supremacy of the church, or to pay the subsidy.

A certificate from a magistrate, that all legal forms had been complied with, was necessary to procure a permit to emigrate, and many would not bend their consciences to the powers either of state or church by taking the required oaths, so at least one-fourth of all smuggled themselves aboard.

The Original Lists of Persons of Quality, Emigrants, &c., to America, 1600–1700, by John Camden Hotten, mention several joiners who came to Massachusetts 1635, bringing servants whose names are not given. There is a tradition that Moses[1] Cleveland was a ship's carpenter's apprentice, and worked his passage over. It is generally stated that he came from Ipswich an indentured apprentice to a joiner, housewright, or master builder, name of his master not ascertained, conjectured to be Edward[1] Winn (whose daughter he afterward married), for "he went to Woburn with his master," and there settled in 1640–1.

Perhaps Moses[1] landed at Plymouth, but more probably at Boston, where, in 1635, there were far better docks. He likely remained from 1635 to 1640 in Boston or vicinity.

In 1642, the selectmen of Woburn appointed "land viewers" to view and set off a share of the public lands promised by the General Court at Boston to MOSES CLEVELAND, and in 1643 he became a freeman. A freeman was required to be of godly walk and conversation, to be at least 20 years of age, to take an oath of allegiance to the government of Massachusetts Bay Colony, to be worth £200, to hold office if elected or pay a fine of 40 shillings, to vote at all elections or pay the same fine. These restrictions and conditions were so onerous that many who were eligible preferred never to become freemen, being more free as they were. Gov. John Winthrop's History of New England contains incomplete lists of freemen.

The History of Woburn, by Rev. Samuel Sewall, M.A., 1868, p. 7. Woburn [deriving its name from Woburn, Hundred of Manshead, Bedfordshire, Eng.] was originally a grant of land made 1640 by the General Court of Massachusetts to Charlestown [now in Suffolk co. and a part of Boston]; and for ab. 2 years afterwards was called "Charlestown Village." The settlement of Charlestown, which is the most ancient town, not only in the county of Middlesex, but likewise (Salem and Dorchester excepted) in the Colony of Massachusetts as distinct from that of Plymouth, had commenced in 1629.

The earliest settlement was made in the part now called North Woburn, Middlesex co., Mass. Persons who, of late years, have had the pleasure of visiting Woburn (only a short distance from Boston), could not but admire the great beauty of this model New England town.

Woburn Militia Muster Roll, 1663:—"MOSES CLEVELAND, aged 39 years," therefore he was born 1624.

Woburn town records show grants of land, taxed estate, and town offices held: I: 11 — 10 of the 8 m° (Oct.) 1647. Letter of Rev. Samuel Sewall—The upland of which MOSES[1] CLEVELAND and George Polly received allotments, and on which their house lots were, was part of the tract called New Bridgefield, and each had 5 acres in what was called "Bull Meadow," then in the south western extremity of Woburn, that part which is now Burlington, bordering on then Cambridge, now Lexington. Moses[1] resided on the part then called New Bridge, which, since the separation of Wilmington from Woburn, lies in the northeasterly part of Woburn, now called North Woburn.

Concerning the residence of Moses[1] Cleveland, the following from the able article by William Richard Cutter, Esq., Librarian of the Woburn Public [Winn] Library, appeared in the Woburn Journal, July 2, 1886:—

THE CLEVELAND ESTATE IN WOBURN.

It has been thought desirable in view of the possible visit of the chief magistrate of the United States to Woburn, to show the place where the Cleveland family dwelt during the period of their residence in the town. Woburn is full of historic material and in six years from now will celebrate its 250th anniversary. The original Cleveland located himself in Woburn a few years after its first settlement and became the progenitor of a numerous race, and the fact should not be lost sight of in connection with the intended honor of the President's visit, that old Woburn is the Cleveland family's ancestral home in New England, and that in this town nearly all the Cleveland family in the United States originated; also that the family has been highly respectable and eminently useful in the past two hundred years. It is not our object merely to show the honored head of the nation an ancestor's gravestone which happens to be preserved in our oldest burying-ground, but to show him the town, the hamlet, and, if possible, the site of the homestead where his first ancestor lived. We can show him lands which his lineal ancestors certainly owned, and whose title has been carefully traced to the present time. We can show him their autographs on deeds, and we hope to show him, conclusively, the site of the first Moses Cleveland's original homestead. But these things are not all so easy as they may seem. In the long period that has passed, some deeds, possibly never recorded, are supposed to be lost, and the chain does not seem to be complete. There are besides a number of widely separated lots scattered about the area of the section where their homesteads were located, whose disposal also appears in the list of the recorded titles, and adds to the complication of the subject.

Efforts to ascertain the locality of the Cleveland family homestead were begun some time ago. An entry in the early Woburn records shows that the family owned two homesteads in 1680, and this fact may aid us in a more positive identification of the first or original homestead. From the above entry it clearly appears that the locality of both homesteads was in New Bridge, or North Woburn. We arrive at this conclusion from the fact that the selectmen, at a meeting in 1680, prepared and spread upon the records a Tithingmen's List of the eighty-two families then located in the town. To each tithingman in the several districts nine were assigned for his oversight, the tenth family being his own. Thus the tithing, or tenth, was preserved in its full sense. These tithingmen were a species of police, and were appointed yearly. At the meeting above mentioned the following persons were appointed for Samuel Snow "to oversee" as tithingman, namely, Moses Cleveland, Aron Cleveland, Joseph Knight, Junior, Thomas Henshaw, Francis Wyman, John Farrer, John Wilson, Senior, Zachariah Snow, and Joseph Carter.

The above company composed the group of ten adjacent families comprising for that year the New Bridge End district, embracing very closely the present area covered by the North Woburn Ward, as arranged by the assessors of the present town. We know that Samuel Snow lived on Pearl street, very near the present center of North Woburn village, and that Moses Cleveland was probably his next neighbor, and Aaron Cleveland his next, and so on, and that the first five of the list were probably located at North Woburn Centre. Francis Wyman and Zachariah Snow and Joseph Carter lived on Wyman Lane, now Wyman Street, and John Farrar and John Wilson were located somewhere in that neighborhood. There is no mention of Cleavelands in any other group, and it is singular that the first four were closely related. Moses Cleveland, the original settler, was the father of the Aaron Cleveland named as his neighbor, and Thomas Henshaw married a daughter of the first Moses, and a kinsman of the Joseph Knight, Junior, intermarried with the Cleveland family. John Wilson, Sr., was also the father-in-law of Aaron Cleveland. Joseph Carter and John Wilson both owned lands bounded north on Hungary Plain in 1676. This old name is Hungary, and not Hungry Plain, as it is sometimes called. It could almost be stated as a rule that the families of the early settlers generally intermarried with those who were their next neighbors. The Aaron Cleveland named, and a son of the original Moses Cleveland, is the Aaron Cleveland of the 1716 gravestone. The fact that the father and son are named separately as the heads of families, which they truly were at the time, shows that in 1680 they probably had separate homesteads.

We are indebted to John Warren Johnson, Esq., for the following researches, of which an abridged statement is here given:

In 1699, Isaac Cleveland, late of Woburn, now an inhabitant in a place called Pomcornseet in Connecticut Colony, conveyed to James Fowle a certain piece of Land (rough) land in Woburn, at a place called the Young Men's Lots, and was granted as "my brother," Moses Cleveland, who was one of those young men to whom the was originally granted. Samuel Carter conveys to Aaron Cleveland seventeen acres of woodland adjacent to Boggy Meadow, or fields, in 1687, probably in the same locality as the above-named piece.

On October 30, 1717, Ebenezer Cleveland of Martha's Vineyard, or as given in the deed, Martin's Vineyard, eldest son and heir of Moses Cleveland, "late of Martin's Vineyard, deceased," who was the eldest son and heir of Moses Cleveland, "late of Oburn, deceased, intestate," conveyed to his younger brother, John Cleveland of Freetown, all right, etc., in the estate of his grandfather, Moses Cleveland, "in the town of Oburn aforesaid."

Aaron Cleveland, the lineal ancestor of President Cleveland, son of Aaron, Senior, being then of Charlestown, buys of Summers Pierce, on April 10, 1722, thirty acres lying at a place in Woburn called New Bridge, also ten acres in Berry Meadow Swamp. The larger piece was bounded westerly, partly by the town road and partly by land which was formerly Joseph Pierce's, now in the possession of said Cleveland, south by land of Josiah Pierce, and east by Boggy Meadow Brook. Shortly afterwards, Nathan Richardson conveys to the same Aaron, "all right in estate that Joseph Pierce, late of Woburn, died, siezed." A few days later Aaron and Abigail, his wife, mortgage to the Massachusetts Commissioners their tract of thirty acres in Woburn, at a place called the New Bridge, bounded north by lands of Nathaniel Tay, east by Boggy Field, Meadow Brook, south partly by Josiah Pierce, and partly by land formerly belonging to Joseph Pierce, and west by the Country Road leading to Andover. (Essex Co., Mass.) This mortgage was discharged by the succeeding owner. The Country Road leading to Andover is the same as the town road above mentioned, and is the present Main Street (via Elm) through North Woburn, in other words the country road and ancient stage-route, known in 1794 as the road to Andover, Haverhill, Essex Co., Mass.) etc.

Aaron Cleveland, last named, next conveys to Jonathan Blanchard of Andover, on April 10, 1724, "one certain messuage or tenement," with several other pieces of land and meadow belonging to the same, all lying in Woburn. Namely, a house and barn which was formerly Joseph Pierce's, deceased, now in the possession of the said Cleveland, with thirty acres of land, which is the homestead, lying at a place commonly called New Bridge. This land was bounded north and west apparently on the main road above mentioned, east upon land which formerly belonged to William Pierce, now in said Cleveland's possession, and south upon land of Josiah Pierce. Another of the premises is a piece lying on the east side of the above homestead, containing also thirty acres, and also bounded west on the aforesaid town road, being apparently the same thirty acres mentioned in a preceding paragraph, and bounded east on Boggy Brook. The other premises were the outlying lots named in the inventory of Aaron Cleveland, Senior, at Maple Meadow and Wood Hill.

According to the above, the Clevelands owned a large portion of what is now the centre of North Woburn village, lying east of the road which from time immemorial has passed through that place. The spot is opposite to the birthplace of Count Rumford. The thirty acres which constituted the Cleveland homestead is the farm formerly connected with the Rumford house. Our opinion is that the home of the first Moses Cleveland was located somewhere on this lot, and that the house and barn which, in 1724, were described as "formerly Joseph Pierce's," were the house and barn owned and occupied by Aaron Cleveland, Senior, who died in 1716, which property was also a part of the same lot. The original Moses Cleveland may have been only a tenant on the same premises, and the owner simply of outlands. From the fact that he left no will, he appears to have had a small property. The estate apparently extended along the main road from the place known for many years as the homestead of Samuel Thompson, Esq., to a point near School Street. The part of the Middlesex Canal lying in this vicinity is the channel of the ancient Boggy Meadow Brook.

The title to the main piece from this point is as follows: Jonathan Blanchard conveys to Ebenezer Thompson, 1729, 13 acres, part of his home lot, bounded northwest by the town road, and again, in 1732, more of his homestead, or 12 acres, including apparently the Rumford place. Ebenezer Thompson in will allowed in 1755, bequeathed his homestead, consisting of a mansion house (the present Rumford House), barn and out-housing and about thirty acres of land, on part of which said buildings stand, to his son, Hiram Thompson, then a minor under fourteen years. The same Ebenezer Thompson also remembers his wife, his daughter-in-law, Ruth Thompson (mother of Count Rumford, who was born two years previously), wife of his eldest son Benjamin, deceased, his grandson Benjamin Thompson (the Count) to whom he gives sixty-seven acres, being partly in Woburn and Wilmington (Middlesex County, Mass.), at the Wood Hill District, and lying on Wood Hill Brook, and also an interest in his lands in Brimfield (Hampden Co., Mass.), and a piece of land in Wilmington. He also remembers his daughter, Hannah Flagg.

The land which Ebenezer Thompson purchased of Jonathan Blanchard in 1732, Hiram Thompson mortgaged to Stephen Hall of Boston, in 1770, and again to Samuel Thompson, Esq., in 1798. He conveyed to the Middlesex Canal proprietors four acres out of this lot in 1801. He also conveyed to Willard Jones, his son-in-law, a half of his estate in 1808, and in his will probated in 1812, bequeathed the improvement of his estate to his wife, and after her death it was intended to be divided among his children, Ebenezer and Benjamin Thompson, Bridget Jones and Hannah Tidd, with a legacy to his grandson, Sewall Thompson. The estate was settled by commissioners and the Supreme Judicial Court in 1813 and 1814. The advertisement of sale in 1814 describes the property as a farm of about thirty acres, etc., situated in the north part of Woburn. The whole was purchased by Willard Jones, and its history from that time is well-known.

Moses[1] Cleveland evidently was a near or an adjoining neighbor to his brother-in-law, George Polly (husband of Elizabeth Winn), who deeded his real estate in Woburn, Apr. 10, 1653, to John Lakin of Reading, as appears in the following: John Lakin's Deed 1653 Communicated by the Hon. Samuel Abbott Green M.D. of Boston: in The New England Historical and Genealogical Register, Boston: Published by The New-England Historic Genealogical Society. XLV: 81–2 —

Moses[1] Cleveland became a man of some prominence in New England and, it would seem, was identified with all the political movements of the day.

From N. E. His. Gen. Reg., Oct. 1851, V: 391–2: Old Dorchester — That the success of [Oliver] Cromwell was highly gratifying to the great body of the first settlers of New England requires no confirmation, and that a government had been overturned which had been the cause of their expatriation and consequent hardships and sufferings, was viewed with much satisfaction by them, admits of no question. It was easy therefore for them to conform to a government growing out of Cromwell's revolution; — a government every way congenial to their habits, wants, and feelings. And having gone on under a congenial legislation for many years, a sudden change must necessarily cause much commotion; especially as they could have no choice of rulers in Eng. It was certain too that if their oppressors should come into power, they could expect to be treated at least with coldness and rigor. A change came; the restoration took place — not a restoration of good government, but a restoration of a government dependent on the will of an unprincipled king * trials, troubles, and difficulties our fathers experienced. * When it occurred, many of them, probably, had but little faith in its stability. That this was the case appears strikingly manifest from some documents of that day now before us. As early as 1662 a letter was received from Charles II., a tolerable copy of which may be read in [Gov. Thomas] Hutchinson's Collection of Original Papers [relative to the History of the Colony of Mass. Bay 1769] [II, Prince Society Publications]. That the letter was very unacceptable to the colony is set in a clear light, by the manner of its reception in a single important town. Copies were probably sent to all the towns, though we have met with but one of them, and that was sent to Woburn. It was thus directed: —

"To ye Constable of Wooberne who is hereby required to publish or cause the same to be published at A Generall toune meeting there." How speedily it went from the "Generall Covrt" to Woburn, does not appear, but it was returned with the following endorsement upon it: — "This is to Certify whom it may concern, that I Thomas Dutton of woobvrn do acknowledg, that on reqvest of several inhabitants of the said tovn, did procvre this Letter of the secretary & gaue it to the CvnstabLe Isack CoLe who refused it, & so i brought it again this 8 of Desember 62. Thomas Dutten."

He was admitted to full communion in the First Church in Charlestown Mass. 6 day 1st mo (March) 1692.

Moses[1] Cleveland is probably buried in the Old First Burying-Ground at Woburn near the grave of his son Aaron[2].

A more thorough search in England may yet discover the ancestry, etc., of Moses[1] Cleveland.

Sewall's Woburn, 602. — Many have been the descendants of Moyses Cleaveland who came to New England the humble apprentice of a joiner in 1635 and established himself in Woburn about 1648, that have done worthily in their day: have been distinguished not only by their position in society, but by their weight of character and influence, and by the usefulness of their lives.

The American Biographical Dictionary by William Allen, D.D., 1857, p. 234, in an account of Moses Cleveland, says, "From him are doubtless descended all in this country who bear the name Cleaveland or Cleveland." This manner of statement is an ordinary error concerning the posterity of Moses[1] Cleveland.

Genealogy of Moses[1] Cleveland and descendants may be found in following:
A Genealogical Dictionary of the First Settlers of New England showing 3 generations of those who came before May 1692 on the basis of Farmer's Register, by James Savage, 1860, I: 406; Early Puritan Settlers of Connecticut, by Royal R. Hinman of Hartford, 1852, p. 618; Sewall's Woburn, 509.
History of the Names of Men &c. from the French of Eusebius Salverte, trans. by Rev. L. H. Mordacque, Lon. 36—MOSES, whose name when translated means "drawn out," [drawn forth] is the one who "draws" or leads the people of God out of the land of Egypt.

The name Cleveland disappeared from Woburn before the close of the first century of the town's existence, and the family distinction may be said to have been gained elsewhere.

Mrs. Ann (Winn) Cleveland d. probably previous to May 6, 1682, for at that date her father, Edward Winne, made his will mentioning her 3 youngest children, but not herself.

No. 5. Rev. Aaron Cleveland, born in Cambridge, Mass.; graduated from Harvard, 1735; settled at Haddam, Conn., 1739; dismissed 1746; settled over South church in Malden, Mass.; dismissed 1750. Then at Halifax whence he sailed to England and took orders in Church of England at London, 1755. Commissioned by Society for Propagation of Gospel in Foreign Parts to take charge of church at New Castle, Penn. While on the way to bring his family to New England, he stopped at the house of his old friend, Benjamin Franklin, and died there 11 Aug., 1757. See obituary, written by Benjamin Franklin in Penn. Gazette, 18 Aug., 1757. His widow died in Salem, Mass., 1788.

CLEVELAND, AARON (Oct. 29, 1715–Aug. 11, 1757), clergyman of the Congregational and later of the English Church, was born in Cambridge, Mass., the son of Aaron and Abigail (Waters) Cleveland. His father kept a tavern in Cambridge, was a contractor and builder, and in time grew well-to-do by speculating in land at Charlestown and elsewhere. In 1738 he moved to East Haddam, Conn., where he rose to be captain in the militia and was described in the tax list as a "gentleman." At the time when his son entered Harvard College, however, he was still a publican. Students were graded according to their social position, and accordingly young Aaron Cleveland ranked only thirty-second in a class of thirty-eight. To compensate him for his lowly station he had inherited from his father a large, powerful, and handsome body. His feats of strength and his popularity with the belles of Cambridge and vicinity eclipsed the fame of whatever intellectual attainments he may have displayed. He swam from Cambridge to Boston and back again without resting, knocked senseless a bully who had journeyed all the way from Boston to try the manhood of the collegians, and excelled in general as a swimmer, wrestler, and skater. He graduated in 1735; on Aug. 4, 1739, married Susannah, daughter of the Rev. Aaron Porter of Medford, Mass.; and in the same year accepted a call to the Strict Congregational Church of Haddam, Conn. There he proved to be a witty, scholarly, and earnest pastor, but his Whitefieldian tendencies were too much for some of his parishioners, dissension arose, and in 1746 he resigned, much to the regret, it would seem, of most of his congregation. He was pastor of the South Church in Malden, Mass., 1747–50, when he went to the newly settled town of Halifax in Nova Scotia to organize the congregation known as Mather's Church. By 1754 he had become convinced of the correctness of the Episcopal position, resigned his charge, went to England, where he was ordained by the Bishop of London, and became a missionary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. The ship on which he returned went aground on Nantucket Shoals; while assisting the sailors Cleveland was struck by a wave and injured severely. He sought to organize a parish at Lewes, Del., but abandoned the field as unpromising. On July 1 1757, he was commissioned by the Venerable Society to take charge of the church at New Castle Del. He proceeded thither, was received with cordiality, and set out for Norwich, Conn., to bring his family. At Philadelphia he became ill and found shelter and care at the home of his friend Benjamin Franklin, who was then absent in Europe. He died in Franklin's house.

No. 4. Rev. Aaron Cleveland, born East Haddam, Conn., 3 Feb., 1744; died at New Haven, Conn., 21 Sept., 1815. He lived most of his life at Norwich, Conn., and in 1779 represented that town in the Legislature, during which session he presented a bill looking to the abolition of slavery. He, indeed, is justly said to be the first one in Connecticut to write against slavery. He became a Congregationlist minister and was settled for a while at Brampton, Vt. After 1803, he was never settled but supplied many pulpits. His second wife was Elizabeth, relict of David Breed, and daughter of Jeremiah Clement. One of the daughters married David L. Dodge, another the Rev. Samuel H. Coxe, D.D. The Rev. Charles Cleveland, so well known and beloved as city missionary of Boston, was a son of Rev. Aaron and was born in Norwich, 21 June, 1772.

consin, in seconding the nomination of C land for the presidency in 1884 (Wisc State Journal, July 10, 1884).

Grover Cleveland was forty-four years o bachelor lawyer of moderate means and s prominence when in 1881 the Democratic p "catered to the better class" by nominating for mayor of Buffalo. Elected to reform the administration, he reformed it. Before his was out he began to be known as the " mayor," and his partisan associates were s what dismayed by the degree of reform that had let loose in electing him. His reputa served him well in 1882. In this year, fore as a Democratic year because of the scandals had injured the Republican party, and the Route trials that were immediately before the public, young Democrats were in many places brought to the ticket to make it easier for Republicans to vote it. In New York, in the perennial struggle to control the Republican state organization, where the grip of Conkling was now broken, the secretary of the treasury, Charles J. Folger, was nominated for governor as an Arthur man. Cleveland was no more than a local favorite for the Democratic nomination until it occurred to the state organization (and to Daniel Manning of Albany, in particular) that the best strategy for the campaign would be the nomination of a new man, little known, and dissociated from the taint of membership in the inner ring. Cleveland was nominated at Syracuse, Sept. 22, 1882, and was elected with the aid of many thousand Republican votes as an "unowned candidate" (McElroy, Grover Cleveland, 1923, I, 45). He became governor of New York on Jan. 3, 1883.

For the next two years Albany, as often, was a vestibule to the White House. Cleveland was under scrutiny as any man must be who overturns political order in New York. His admirpose the drift of the Democratic party toward the nomination of the governor as president of the United States.

It is unlikely that Cleveland would have been nominated or elected president had it not been for James G. Blaine. That Republican statesman, outstanding among the leaders as the Civil War receded, had a record that was defaced by suspicions of near-corruption that he had never been able to dispel. An ambitious aspirant for the presidency, Blaine found that these charges, supported by the Mulligan letters, interfered with his chances in 1876. The deadlock of the convention in 1880 blocked Blaine, so that there was no occasion for his enemies to make great use of the charges in this campaign. As 1884 approached, Blaine was the great aspirant again; and the group that had opposed him for eight years was vigorous in attack and threat. The threat was that in the event of his nomination they would lead a secession into the Democratic party, if only that party would nominate a suitable man. Blaine was, in spite of this, nominated; the insurgents seceded and were given the enduring name of "mugwumps" (M. Sullivan,

CLEVELAND, STEPHEN GROVER (Mar. 18, 1837–June 24, 1908), President of the United States, was the fifth child of a country clergyman of the Presbyterian Church. His father, Richard Falley Cleveland, a graduate of Yale College and of the theological seminary at Princeton, was descended from a Moses Cleaveland who arrived in Massachusetts in 1635. His mother, Ann Neal, was born in 1806 and married in 1829 in Baltimore. She met her husband while he was tutor in that place. Her father was a publisher of whose antecedents little is known except that there was an Irish strain in his blood. Cleveland was born in the parsonage at Caldwell, N. J. (Americana, VII, 150), and was named for the parson who had preceded Richard Falley Cleveland there. In 1841 he was taken by his family to Fayetteville, N. Y., where his father had a church. The family moved again in 1850 to Clinton, N. Y.; and here when the father died in 1853 Grover was forced to undertake the larger part of his own support. He had already worked in a general store, and now he found a position in the New York Institution for the Blind; but life was hard and living was rather precarious for him until he entered the family of an uncle of his mother, Lewis Allen, at Black Rock, near Buffalo. He resisted the Whig tendencies rife in western New York, and became a Democrat before he became a voter. He studied law, was admitted to the bar in 1859, and in 1863 became assistant district attorney of Erie County. Financial burdens, and the need to aid his mother, kept him out of the army in the Civil War—to his political disadvantage. But he helped make it possible for two of his brothers to serve. His practise of law grew reasonably, as did his repute as a dependable, steady workman. The post of sheriff of Erie County came to him unsought—to his further political disadvantage since the necessity of the post required him to execute two murderers. He began his long career of making friends through his enemies by relieving Erie County of the burden of dishonest contractors. "We love him most for the enemies he has made," said Gen. Edward S. Bragg of Wisconsin, in seconding the nomination of Cleveland for the presidency in 1884 (Wisconsin State Journal, July 10, 1884).

Before his term was out he began to be known as the "veto mayor," and his partisan associates were somewhat dismayed by the degree of reform that they had let loose in electing him. His reputation served him well in 1882. In this year, foreseen as a Democratic year because of the scandals that had injured the Republican party, and the Star Route trials that were immediately before the public, young Democrats were in many places brought to the ticket to make it easier for Republicans to vote it. In New York, in the perennial struggle to control the Republican state organization, where the grip of Conkling was now broken, the secretary of the treasury, Charles J. Folger, was nominated for governor as an Arthur man. Cleveland was no more than a local favorite for the Democratic nomination until it occurred to the state organization (and to Daniel Manning of Albany, in particular) that the best strategy for the campaign would be the nomination of a new man, little known, and dissociated from the taint of membership in the inner ring. Cleveland was nominated at Syracuse, Sept. 22, 1882, and was elected with the aid of many thousand Republican votes as an "unowned candidate" (McElroy, Grover Cleveland, 1923, I, 45). He became governor of New York on Jan. 3, 1883.

For the next two years Albany, as often, was a vestibule to the White House. Cleveland was under scrutiny as any man must be who overturns political order in New York. His admirers watched for, and saw evidence of the same stubborn honesty that had given them satisfaction and him local prominence in Buffalo; his political associates watched with less comfort his independence of judgment and his refusal to play politics as a game of spoils, patronage, and party regularity. One of his vetoes (New York Times, Mar. 3, 1883), that of a five-cent-fare bill for the elevated railroads of New York City, brought him into opposition to a popular movement that had for the moment the support of young Theodore Roosevelt, then in the Assembly. The lowering of the rate from ten cents to five was desired; but was unfortunately an obvious violation of the State's charter contract with the companies, and to Cleveland's simple and direct mind there was no alternative to a veto. Roosevelt, on his second thought, sustained the veto and made apologies for his indorsement of the measure; and together Roosevelt and Cleveland worked for municipal reform legislation for New York City which, when passed in March 1884, became at once useful for the metropolis and proof of Cleveland's willingness for non-partisan cooperation. In his relations with Tammany Hall Cleveland made valuable enemies while governor. His fight with John Kelly, then leader of Tammany, turned upon the continuance in politics of state Senator Thomas F. Grady. Cleveland won the fight, as well as the hostility of the Tammany organization. The latter proceeded, in the spring of 1884, to oppose the drift of the Democratic party toward the nomination of the governor as president of the United States.

It is unlikely that Cleveland would have been nominated or elected president had it not been for James G. Blaine. That Republican statesman, outstanding among the leaders as the Civil War receded, had a record that was defaced by suspicions of near-corruption that he had never been able to dispel. An ambitious aspirant for the presidency, Blaine found that these charges, supported by the Mulligan letters, interfered with his chances in 1876. The deadlock of the convention in 1880 blocked Blaine, so that there was no occasion for his enemies to make great use of the charges in this campaign. As 1884 approached, Blaine was the great aspirant again; and the group that had opposed him for eight years was vigorous in attack and threat. The threat was that in the event of his nomination they would lead a secession into the Democratic party, if only that party would nominate a suitable man. Blaine was, in spite of this, nominated; the insurgents seceded and were given the enduring name of "mugwumps" (M. Sullivan,

Our Times, II, 1927, 382, traces the word to the New York Sun, Mar. 23, 1884); and when the Democratic convention came together in Chicago, July 8, 1884, the delegates knew that if Cleveland should be their choice there would be a chance of enough Republican support to elect him. They also beheld the Tammany delegation opposing him at every point. The opposition was as valuable as the promise of support, for Tammany had a bad name; and Cleveland was nominated on the second ballot, with Thomas A. Hendricks of Indiana for the vice-presidency.

The hope of the mugwumps for a canvass in which the spotted record of Blaine could be opposed by the clean name of Cleveland was soon destroyed. The mugwump attacks on Blaine had gone far beyond the evidence in viciousness and bitterness, and had inspired his supporters to eager search for similar material for a counter-attack. On July 21, 1884, a Buffalo paper gave first publication to what had been found. The story, which had been hawked among the newspapers for several days, purported to show that some eight years previously the Democratic candidate had become the father of an illegitimate child, which he had since supported (Chicago Tribune, July 22, 23, 1884). For the rest of the canvass much of the Republican press published, enlarged, and falsified the case of Maria Halpin (who was the woman named); and made much of the alleged personal immorality of Cleveland. When the Democratic managers, dismayed at the scandal, inquired of Cleveland what they should do, he answered, briefly for once, "Tell the truth" (Harper's Weekly, Aug. 16, 1884, p. 528). A novel, embodying parts of the situation, and presenting its hero in an heroic light, became a best-seller a few years later when Cleveland had been made president for a second term (P. L. Ford, The Honorable Peter Stirling, 1894). How far the scandal hurt him or affected the campaign cannot be known; it was at least partly offset by the accident that befell Blaine when on Oct. 29 the indiscreet Dr. Burchard used the fatal words "rum, Romanism, and rebellion" as a description of the common bond among Democrats. Cleveland was attacked, also, for his failure to serve in the Civil War and for the substitute he hired to take his place when he was drafted; in spite of the fact that Blaine had equally abstained from service. Cleveland was, however, elected by a plurality of about 23,000 votes over Blaine, although he had a minority of all the votes cast. His administration of the presidency must be judged in light of the fact that although the Democrats controlled a majority in the new House of Representatives, the Senate continued Republican. At no time was there a possibility of a one-party control of the government, with President, Senate, and House of the same political faith (H. C. Thomas, The Return of the Democratic Party to Power in 1884, 1919).

Cleveland

At the age of forty-eight Grover Cleveland took office, the first Democratic president after the Civil War. "He is a truly American type of the best kind," wrote James Russell Lowell, who was acquainted with enough types to know (to R. W. Gilder, Dec. 26, 1887, in C. E. Norton, Letters of James Russell Lowell, 1894, II, 344). He was still a bachelor, and his unmarried sister, Rose Elizabeth Cleveland, lived with him in the executive mansion. A rather short and unimpressive man, he made up in bulk what he lacked in height and weighed over 250 pounds when inaugurated (C. R. Lingley, "Characteristics of President Cleveland," in Political Science Quarterly, XXXIII, 255). He was clean-shaven, except for a small mustache, at a time when American statesmen generally went bearded. He was reticent and unexpansive, except in the private society of his intimates; but the actor Joseph Jefferson, with whom he fished and near whom he lived in his summer place, "Gray Gables" on Buzzard's Bay, testified that he was a mimic of high order, told a good story, and might have been a great actor (O. S. Straus, Under Four Administrations. From Cleveland to Taft, 1922, p. 115). The close friendship that he maintained for many years with Richard Watson Gilder suggests that although he was without much formal education he had traits that made him companionable to cultivated men; his choice of Princeton as a home for his years of retirement confirms this. But it was the task of his friends constantly to combat the hostile, and apparently untruthful, gossip, that he was habitually intemperate. More than once, after he had married, it was necessary for the wife of one of his cabinet members to assert the untruthfulness of the slander that in drunken fits he beat his wife (Mrs. William C. Whitney, Milwaukee Sentinel, Dec. 13, 1888); and even Mrs. Cleveland was driven to assert that she was happy (to Mrs. Maggie Nicodemus, June 3, 1888. McElroy, Grover Cleveland, I, 286). The persistence of slander and attack showed the resourcefulness of the political opposition (which was as likely to be Democratic as Republican), and the craving of the press for sensation. Cleveland's marriage, June 2, 1886, to Frances Folsom, daughter of his former law partner Oscar Folsom, was "news" interesting to the public and oppressive to the persons concerned. No detail was too small for the ubiquitous reporters, and Cleveland was outraged by the "colossal impertinence" with which his private life was pried into by the press (McElroy, I, 187). There were five children by this marriage, of whom all but one survived him.

The history of the Democratic party for the twenty-five years before 1885 was not such as to produce a large group of recognized and available party leaders from whom might be selected an impressive cabinet. Only Thomas F. Bayard, who became secretary of state, and who had been Cleveland's chief rival for the nomination, had a name that meant much to Americans at large; and his prominence owed much to the generations of service rendered by his forebears in Delaware. Daniel Manning, the anti-Tammany New Yorker who had "invented" Cleveland, received the Treasury. William C. Endicott of Massachusetts went to the War Department and paid part of Cleveland's debt to the independents. William C. Whitney, New York business man and son-in-law of the Ohio Standard Oil magnate, Senator Henry B. Payne, took over the Navy. The Post Office was given to William F. Vilas of Wisconsin, railroad magnate and orator. To the southern Democrats, who had seen little of office for so many years, went the Interior Department, to Lucius Q. C. Lamar of Mississippi; and the office of attorney-general, to Augustus H. Garland of Arkansas. The last two appointments received violent denunciation from the Republican press; but Cleveland subsequently promoted Lamar still further to the Supreme Court. In 1888 Melville W. Fuller of Chicago was appointed to be chief justice of the United States. The minor appointments tested the sincerity of Cleveland's pledge for a "practical reform in the civil service" (to G. W. Curtis, Dec. 25, 1884, McElroy, I, 124). His party had advocated this reform for many years, so long as there was no prospect of success; but with the inauguration of Cleveland the political "bread line" formed at once, and Democrats of every order demanded jobs, to throw Republicans out, or as party rewards, or for the health of their wives, or frankly because they needed the money. They had been kept away from such opportunities for twenty-four years. Cleveland had made no promise of such complete disregard of political considerations as would have lifted him out of all contact with the standards of his time; but his slow and reluctant compliance with partisan demands, and the steady support that he gave to the work of the Civil Service Commission mark a definite break from the practise of presidential politics that had long prevailed. He induced Congress to repeal the Tenure-of-Office Act that had hobbled presidents since 1867, and he maintained with acidity and success the independence of the president in appointments. But the devoted civil-service reformers were not satisfied, and the party politicians were enraged. Cleveland disliked and suffered under the criticism of disappointed politicians but was not diverted by it from his chosen course, and could never understand why the public would not see his duty as he saw it.

Cleveland

An even more unpopular duty than that which guarded the public offices led Cleveland to protect the Civil War pensioners from the attack of fraudulent claimants and cheap political sentimentalists. The Arrears of Pensions Act (1879) had made it profitable for veterans to search for excuses that would place them on the lists. They could now receive not only current pensions, as allowed by law, but back pensions from the time of discharge until the time of going on the pension list. In many cases these arrears ran into hundreds or thousands of dollars. A swarm of astute attorneys discovered the easy money to be made by aiding veterans to get pensions; and the more dubious the evidence, the larger were the fees. Congress was willing, with the surplus in the treasury, to pass in the form of private bills many claims that, for lack of authority, or lack of fact, could not be granted through the ordinary channels of the pension bureau. No congressman liked the unpleasant notoriety that might attach to a refusal to vote a pension to a soldier, however undeserved. Such bills descended upon Cleveland in a flood. In the spring of 1886 he began to read these bills and the papers that accompanied them, and to veto those that were without merit. Many were so completely bad as to be a scandal upon the Congress that voted them; pensions to deserters, pensions to men who had not been in the army, pensions for injuries received many years after the war was over. In February 1887, he vetoed a general pension bill based upon the new principle of allowing relief to veterans, not because of wounds incurred in the service, but "upon the ground of service and present disability alone" (J. D. Richardson, Messages and Papers of the Presidents, VIII, 549). The persons interested in such legislation turned upon Cleveland as an enemy to old soldiers; and many of them, running for office, promised friendship as a bait for soldier votes. In May 1887, Cleveland made a damaging error in judgment. Upon a recommendation from the War Department he ordered the return to the states of their origin of such

Confederate battle-flags as were in the possession of the government. In 1905 President Roosevelt accomplished this return with general approval, but the time was not ripe for it in 1887; and a Democrat was not the proper agent for such a friendly gesture. In Ohio a soldier candidate for governor gained votes by asserting that "No Rebel flags will be surrendered while I am Governor" (J. B. Foraker, Notes of a Busy Life, 1916, I, 242); and the commander of the Grand Army of the Republic declared, in violent denunciation, "May God palsy the hand that wrote the order!"

The great surplus revenue that began to accumulate in the United States Treasury after the resumption of specie payments (1879) constituted the most embarrassing of the problems of internal policy for President Cleveland. It was a certain incentive to extravagance, and invited the opposition to attack the government for overtaxing the people; yet it could not well be lessened without legislation revising and reducing many of the customs duties and thereby stirring up the same opposition to resist a departure from the principles of protection. Within the Democratic party the years 1881–87 brought about the overthrow of the Randall Democrats, who were generally protectionists, and the rise to power of the Carlisle-Mills group who indorsed varying degrees of tariff reform. Cleveland, never a free trader, was led to an attack upon the tariff because he was embarrassed by the surplus, and because he believed that tariff rates had come to be evidence of improper favoritism to the protected industries. He gave his support to Carlisle, who had been elected speaker of the House in 1883, and who was reëlected in 1885 and 1887; and when Congress met for the session of 1887–88 the message of the President was a comprehensive broadside against the existing rates, and an invitation to revise them. The debates of 1888 over the proposed Mills bill were the result; a second result was the decision of the Republican party to undertake an aggressive movement in favor of even more protection. The conventions of 1888 were held before the tariff debate was over. Cleveland was renominated (with Allen G. Thurman of Ohio as vice-president), and his friends were able to persuade the convention to indorse the Mills bill as a proper Democratic tariff. Benjamin Harrison and Levi P. Morton were nominated by the Republican convention. The political waters were muddied in the closing days of the canvass, as they were in 1884, by a political trick or roorback that this time took the form of the Murchison letter. This letter, released to the press at Los Angeles, Oct. 21, 1888, was the consequence of a trap that had been baited for Sir Lionel Sackville-West, the British minister in Washington. Sir Lionel incautiously fell into it, and gave great glee to Republicans by writing to an unknown correspondent, Murchison, that a vote for Cleveland would be useful to England. Cleveland dismissed the minister for his indiscretion; but the damage was done, for the letter appeared to sustain one of the Republican contentions, that tariff reduction was a British policy, and was perhaps inspired by British gold. In spite of having a plurality of the popular vote, Cleveland lost the election.

Cleveland

In 1889 Cleveland retired to New York, to resume the practise of law and to seek such privacy as is allowed to ex-presidents. He was forced to undertake gainful work, because he had no private fortune; but his associates testified that he was indifferent to fees and profits. He enjoyed his family, his fishing trips, his summer home, and an increasing amount of respect and attention from his fellow citizens. In 1890 the revulsion against the protective tariff moved on of itself to an overwhelming defeat of the Republicans at the polls. The extreme McKinley Tariff (1890) had uncovered dangerous discontent in the West and the South; and tariff opponents turned more and more to Cleveland to resume his leadership. There was much spontaneity in the popular demand that he should be the Democratic candidate again in 1892, although some of his friends played a skilful hand in nursing it (G. F. Parker, post, p. 136). The movement gained such volume in 1891 that Cleveland's great New York rival, David B. Hill, sought to head it off by holding the Democratic convention to select delegates to the national convention early in the year. The "snap" convention did its work Feb. 22, 1892, and was a boomerang for Hill. He gained control of the New York delegation with ease, but his opposition did now what John Kelly's had done in 1884. It advertised Cleveland not only among tariff reformers but also among friends of the Australian ballot and enemies of "boss" rule. The Cleveland movement swept the party, and the Chicago convention approved it on the first ballot. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois was nominated for vice-president. Tariff reduction was confirmed as the major issue of the canvass. In the ensuing struggle it was not hard to defeat the Republican ticket, Benjamin Harrison and Whitelaw Reid, for Harrison had lost control of the party leaders. He was losing votes as well, for Republicans in the western states were still angry about the McKinley bill and were seeking financial relief through the agency of free-silver coinage. Some of them turned Democrat, and more than one million of them seceded for the time and voted in the new People's party. But it was impossible for Cleveland, when reëlected, and reinaugurated in 1893, to satisfy the voters who had chosen him. A great financial panic was imminent, and the sufferers from it were calling for impossible relief; there was still a protectionist minority within his own party, ably led by Senator A. P. Gorman of Maryland; and the free-silver coinage that was demanded by western and southern populist elements was a form of currency inflation that he bitterly disapproved.

As far back as 1885, Cleveland had gone squarely on record against inflation (Letter to A. J. Warner, Feb. 24, 1885, New York Herald, Feb. 28, 1885). He now continued this attitude in the face of the financial crisis that broke in April 1893, and instead of surrendering to the demand for free silver he summoned the Fifty-third Congress, Democratic for once in both Houses, to repeal the Sherman Silver Purchase Act 1890, which was the most visible and concrete of the elements of financial unsoundness. He secured the repeal of this act, with the support of many Republican votes, but thereby he broke his party and drew upon himself the permanent hostility of the inflationist wing. It was not, for many years, common knowledge that at the moment when the special session of 1893 was called, the life of the President was uncertain because of the diseased condition of the roof of his mouth. This was successfully operated on, and his convalescence was concealed from the public (Dr. W. W. Keen, in Saturday Evening Post, Sept. 22, 1917). When, in the winter after the panic, Congress undertook the fulfilment of the Democratic pledge for tariff reduction, the animosities left from the fight on silver prevented harmony on any program. The protectionist Democrats stood out against revision and forced the drafting of a bill (the Wilson bill) that was so little a compliance with the pledge that Cleveland openly denounced it as "party perfidy and party dishonor." He was not willing to sign it; but the situation of the treasury was such that he did not dare veto it and thus forego the chance of improving revenue. He permitted the Wilson bill to become a law without his signature; and he himself became a president without a party for the remaining years of his term.

The cabinet of the second administration showed a greater familiarity with the problem of government and a wider acquaintance among Democratic leaders than did that of the first term. It was not bitterly partisan, for at its head was Judge Walter Q. Gresham, who had only recently left the Republican party. John G. Carlisle, as secretary of the treasury, had to wrestle with the panic. The War Department was given to Daniel S. Lamont, private secretary of the first administration. Richard Olney of Massachusetts was attorney-general; Wilson S. Bissell, an old law partner of the President, was postmaster-general; Hilary A. Herbert, who while in Congress had been chairman of the committee on naval affairs, was secretary of the navy; Hoke Smith of Georgia was at the Interior; J. Sterling Morton of the Nebraska sound-money wing was secretary of agriculture. But Cleveland himself was unquestionably the dominant figure of the cabinet, and he still continued somewhat to slow down administration by his inability to delegate authority, or to act upon any judgment but his own. The typical stories tell of his long hours of patient work over papers in minor cases, and of his briefs and notes upon matters that, soundly administered, would never have got beyond the desk of some subordinate. In his first term he often answered White House telephone calls; he never grew to be entirely comfortable with secretaries. The voluminous long-hand memoranda that he drew up would have been invaluable sources for the historian, had he not regarded them as personal, taken them into retirement with him, and destroyed many of them.

Out of the treasury, whose plethoric condition had caused him so much care in his first term, came the problem of a shrinking balance, that threatened even to disappear. Receipts fell away because of business depression. Gold was hoarded by its nervous owners, who paid their debts to the government in paper money whenever they could. It was not only impossible to make receipts balance expenditures in any fiscal year of the second term, but it was uncertain whether the treasury could continue its policy of redeeming on demand every type of currency in gold. The gold reserve, upon which this policy depended, fell below 100 millions in April 1893. Thereafter Cleveland, through Carlisle, kept it alive only by the desperate means of four bond issues, aggregating $293,000,000. Even with these it was difficult to draw gold into the treasury as rapidly as it was drained out. The Republican opposition made much of this embarrassment, charging Cleveland with running the government on borrowed money in time of peace; the Democratic opposition, desirous of a silver or a paper basis, made equal use of it to indicate Cleveland's close alliance with the great financial interests. His large capacity for taking punishment was needed, and was adequate.

An aftermath of the panic of 1893 was the railroad strike of 1894, in which the American Railway Union, engineered by Eugene V. Debs, undertook to tie up railway traffic by a strike in sympathy with the employees of the Pullman Company. The center of the strike was in the vicinity of Chicago, where the boycott on the Pullman palace cars originated. There was violence in the train yards, but the governor of Illinois, John P. Altgeld, believed that the violence was under control. The federal government intervened in two ways, both of which were novel: an injunction was issued by a federal court restraining the strikers, and Cleveland, upon application of federal officials, sent troops from the regular army to Chicago, to enforce the laws. The strikers had interfered with the free flowing of the mail service. Altgeld asked in vain for the withdrawal of the troops from his state, and criticized their presence as "this uncalled for reflection on our people"; but Cleveland had his way.

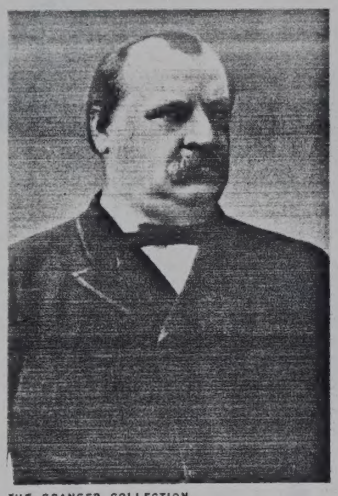
Cleveland's dominance of the State Department revealed itself first in Gresham's withdrawal of American recognition from the revolutionary government in Hawaii, and in his refusing to have anything to do with the overturning of the native monarchy there. The American residents had engineered the revolution in the final weeks of the Harrison administration, believing that prompt recognition and speedy incorporation in the United States would follow. Had the phrase then been current, Cleveland would have been correctly described as vigorously anti-imperialist. He showed the same temper between 1895 and 1897, during the Cuban insurrection, when American filibustering expeditions were organizing for Cuban service, and American arms salesmen were trying to make deliveries of consignments of munitions of war. Part of the American press whipped up an enthusiasm for the Cuban patriots, and played in detail upon the excesses of the royalist troops and the sufferings of non-combatants. Congressmen were openly sympathetic. But the President tried to enforce the neutrality law, and refused to be driven by sentiment into a war with Spain. Even with both houses joining in concurrent resolutions for Cuban recognition, he declined to be forced. He was strongly American, however, when he believed that the facts called for sharp action; and he brought England and the United States to the verge of war by intervening in the old quarrel between England and Venezuela over their joint boundary. In this, in a message to Congress,

Dec. 17, 1895, Cleveland gave new precision to the interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine, maintaining the hegemony of the United States in the Americas, and the vital interest of the United States in having boundary disputes with European countries settled without risk of aggrandizement. England yielded the point, believing that Cleveland was correctly interpreting American opinion; and the matter was steered into an amicable arbitration. In the reaction of relief at the passing of this danger, Cleveland and Olney, now secretary of state, negotiated a general arbitration treaty with England; but the Senate mutilated this until it was no longer useful.

Long before the end of the second term, Cleveland and his official family were outside the dominant currents of the Democratic party, and western and southern demands were driving the party into a campaign for free silver. There was much denunciation of him before and during the convention of 1896. After the nomination of William J. Bryan, the Cleveland Democrats, who could not bring themselves to vote for Maj. William McKinley the Republican candidate, and who would not vote for Bryan, organized a gold Democratic convention that nominated independent candidates. For these they voted, in protest to the course of their party. In the following March, Cleveland retired to a modest home in Princeton, N. J., and here maintained his residence for the rest of his life.

As a private citizen, Cleveland became a public and impressive figure. After a very few months the animosities began to fade, and opinion began more and more to turn to him as one of the few independent and disinterested voices in America. He was in demand for speeches and articles, and spent much of his time in preparing the autobiographical essays which he delivered as lectures, and later printed as Presidential Problems. He found time for friendship and recreation, and for active participation in the affairs of Princeton University, which had made him one of its trustees. On three more occasions he came prominently into the circle of great events. In 1902, during the anthracite coal strike, President Roosevelt turned to him for aid, and sought his cooperation in a public commission that was to investigate this phase of the labor controversy (J. B. Bishop, Theodore Roosevelt and His Time, 1920, I, 204). The project fell through because of difficulties over personnel, but for a moment it brought together in a common non-political purpose the outstanding figures of the two great parties. In 1904 there was talk of a third term for Cleveland, not so much because of a change among radical Demo-

CLEVELAND, (STEPHEN) GROVER (1837–1908), president of the United States from 1885 to 1889 and again from 1893 to 1897, was born, the fifth of nine children, in Caldwell, Essex county, N.J., on March 18, 1837. His father, Richard Falley Cleveland, a Presbyterian clergyman and a graduate of Yale college and of the theological seminary at Princeton, was a descendant of Moses Cleveland, who came to Massachusetts from England in 1635. His mother, Ann Neal, of Baltimore, Md., met and married Richard Cleveland in 1829 while he was employed as a tutor in that city. In 1841 the family moved to Fayetteville, N.Y., and in 1850 went to Clinton, N.Y., where Grover attended the town academy. He intended to enter Hamilton college, but at the death of his father in 1853 he abandoned his college plans to aid in supporting his mother and her five dependent children. He had worked in a general store in Fayetteville and now took a teaching position at the New York Institution for the Blind at New York city.



THE GRANGER COLLECTION

CLEVELAND, PHOTOGRAPHED IN 1888

In 1855 Grover Cleveland became a clerk in the Buffalo law office of Rogers, Bowen and Rogers and in 1859 was admitted to the bar. He joined the Democratic party along with his law associates and quickly assumed an active role in the local organization. When the American Civil War began, Grover, who had no urge to become a soldier, did not enlist, as did two of his brothers. When drafted in 1863 he took advantage of the commutation provision of the law and hired a substitute. He continued, meanwhile, to support his mother and to assist two teen-age sisters.

His practice of law grew as did his reputation in the party. In 1862 he won his first elective office as ward supervisor. The following year the district attorney of Erie county appointed Cleveland his assistant and two years later (1865) the Democrats chose him as their candidate for district attorney. Defeated in the contest, Cleveland returned more actively to his law practice in the ensuing years and devoted his great energy and unflagging industry to a growing number of cases that came to his office. In 1870 he was elected sheriff of Erie county, and discharged the duties of the office with honesty and vigour. He devoted the years immediately succeeding his retirement from the office of sheriff to his law practice and came to be recognized as one of the leaders of the bar in western New York.

During these years of early manhood, Cleveland revealed a personality of contrasting characteristics. An indefatigable worker, he appeared as a stern, stolid and dignified citizen before the public. He sought relaxation, on the other hand, with a small circle of friends drinking, singing, roistering and indulging in carefree banter in the cafés, saloons and beer gardens of Buffalo. This dual aspect of his character persisted throughout his life.

Mayor of Buffalo.—The Democrats nominated the 44-year-old bachelor lawyer for mayor of Buffalo in 1881. The city government had been marred by extravagance and maladministration, and voters, revolting against the Republican incumbent, elected Cleveland. Chosen to reform the city administration, he thoroughly reorganized the various departments of the government and introduced businesslike methods in the conduct of the public's affairs. He attracted widespread attention by his independence and his generous use of the veto and by 1882 state party leaders groomed him for a larger field. The Republicans in New York, weakened by scandals and intraparty strife, nominated Charles J. Folger (1818–1884), then U.S. secretary of the treasury, for governor. The Democrats chose Cleveland, who was little known Republican voters, Cleveland received an unprecedented plurality of 192,854 votes; he became governor of New York on Jan. 3, 1883.

Governor of New York.—As governor, Cleveland displayed the same stern and independent qualities that had marked his other public positions. He refused to play the game of partisan politics with its dreary round of patronage, spoils and party regularity. He subordinated the demands of party leaders to the general interest, thereby earning the plaudits of the public and the ill will of the political bosses. He backed a strong civil service law, vetoed a popular bill that would have lowered the fares on New York city's elevated lines in violation of a contract with the companies, worked for municipal reform legislation for New York city and fought Tammany Hall over appointments and legislation. The governor laboriously scrutinized all bills passed by the legislature and wielded the veto power without fear or favour.

President of the United States, 1885–89.—In 1884 the Democratic party had been out of power in national affairs for 23 years. The Republican party, in control at Washington since 1861, was now split into two factions—the Halfbreeds and the Stalwarts—which weakened its organization and sapped its effectiveness. The situation afforded the Democrats an unusual opportunity. The Democratic national convention adopted a platform calling for liberal reforms in the administrative departments, the civil service and the national finances and, despite the opposition of Tammany Hall, nominated Cleveland for president. The Republicans, after a contest involving violent personal animosities, nominated James G. Blaine (q.v.) of Maine, a brilliant man whose sense of honesty had been dulled by protracted associations with speculative promoters.

The ensuing campaign, one of the bitterest in U.S. history, was noted chiefly for its mudslinging. Partisans accused Cleveland of pro-Southern sentiments because he had avoided war service during the Civil War and exposed an unsavoury incident from his private life involving an illegitimate child. On the other side, campaigners unraveled a sordid story of Blaine's part in a series of political and financial scandals. Despite the closeness of the popular vote (4,874,986 to 4,851,981) Cleveland won the election by an electoral college vote of 219 to 182 (see also UNITED STATES [OF AMERICA]: History).

Cleveland's first term, while uneventful, was characterized by firmness, justice and a steady adherence to the principles which he deemed best for the nation. He staunchly backed the "Pendleton bill" (1883), designed to develop a nonpartisan civil service by making entrance and promotion dependent upon competitive examinations. Cleveland added 11,757 jobs to the classified service during his first term. Continuing an earlier practice, Cleveland made extensive use of the veto power, vetoing or pocket vetoing 413 bills (over two-thirds of which were private pension bills) passed by the congress. The president, in a politically explosive move, vetoed the Dependent Pension bill, a bold raid upon the federal treasury calculated to increase political support for its backers. Cleveland further alienated the bigwigs of his party by moving against the tariff.

In 1887 there was a large and growing surplus in the treasury which, because of the prevailing fiscal legislation of the country, acted to restrict the amount of currency available for business. About two-thirds of the public revenue came from tariff duties levied on imports from foreign countries. The Republican party, during its period of ascendancy at Washington, had fostered high tariffs to protect native American industry. Cleveland vigorously attacked the tariff legislation of the country, devoting his entire annual message of 1887 to the problem. He did not propose free trade, but he condemned the tariff laws as "vicious, inequitable and illogical." The administration tariff measure, the Mills bill, passed the Democratic house but was withdrawn owing to amendments in the Republican senate.

The presidential campaign of 1888 opened while the debate on the Mills bill raged. Although disgruntled party bosses fretted, the Democrats renominated Cleveland. The Republicans passed over the onetime loser, Blaine, and nominated Benjamin Harrison

IDENTITY OF ANN, WIFE OF BENJAMIN CLEVELAND

The Cleveland Genealogy (Vol. I, 65) gives the wife of Benjamin[3] Cleveland (Aaron[2], Moses[1]) of Canterbury and Windham, Conn., as being Ann Church, daughter of John and Sarah (Beckley) Church of Hartford, and this identification has been copied in other genealogies. It seems to be based entirely on a deed, in which Elizabeth Church of Hartford joins with Benjamin Cleveland of Canterbury and his wife Ann, in selling a certain 4 acres to James Hannison, or Henderson, Feb. 13, 1723/4.

On Apr. 6, 1698, Thomas[3] Clark (Thomas[2], Nicholas[1]) of Hartford married Elizabeth Burr, two children were born, Joseph 1698/9 and Ann, Apr. 17, 1702 (Hartford Vital Records, Barbour Index) The death of Thomas Clark is not recorded, but the Inventory of his estate is dated Dec. 10, 1703, and administration is granted to the widow, Elizabeth Apr. 27, 1704.

On Aug. 17, 1710, Elizabeth Burr Clark married (2) Samuel Church.

- by Helen D. Love, of South Kent, Conn. American Genealogist, Jan. 1936

I have questioned the above point in "Genealogy of Benjamin Cleveland" by Horace Gilette Cleveland, since the Ann Church named was born 1673, married 1723, making her 50 when married, and from other records, the first child, Esther born 1727 and the last child Chloe born 1744, thus her child bearing period would have been from her age of 54 to 71.

Oliver B. Heyden, migrated from New York State to Hamer's Corners now Clyde, Ohio; about 1824, coming with his mother, brother William, and her parents the Cleavlands, After marriage and prior to Apr. 1837 they moved to Indiana, and settled in the woods, staking out a claim. A glimpse of their life there may be gained from a letter to his mother, Mrs. Abigail Stone, dated Dec. 11th A D 1838.

Dear mother i once more take my pen in hand to inform you that through the goodness of the supreme being i am yet in the land of the living and a trying to strugle along through my menny difficultys to support my family and try to obtain a home for uss  i have had my selection bought from under me and left it the 15th of september and moved in to polaske (Pulaski) Co.  i hav to go about 30 miles to mill and about the same distance to buy my grain. my house for 7 or 8 weeks was 4 crocthes put in the ground and covered with brush and hay; until i got my cabbin up. my house that i have got up is 16 by 18. i have got a good puncheon floor in it and a good stick chimney, a stone back wall and two good doors and a twelve light window in it.  sometimes since i have binn here i have not had nothing for my family to eat but indian bread. we have no cow at preasant so we do without milk or butter but i am in hopes if i could live untill an other fall i shall have better.  Dear mother brother and Sister i hope that if we should not be permitted to behold each others faces this side of a boundless Eternity, may we be so unspeakable happy as to be permited to surround the dazeling throne of God to sing praises to his adorable name forevermore in that world without end.

Between 1841 and 1844 they returned to Clyde, Ohio where he died, and she married Isaac Moe.

ORGANIZATION IN NAUVOO

First Year in Nauvoo

Sarah M. Kimball, an ardent member of the Church noted throughout her life for her many deeds of love and kindness, who became General Secretary of the Relief Society in 1880 and a Counselor in the Presidency in 1892, has related the circumstances that led to the organization of Relief Society:

In the spring of 1842, a maiden lady (Miss Cook) was seamstress for me, and the subject of combining our efforts for assisting the Temple hands came up in conversation. She desired to be helpful, but had no means to furnish. I told her I would furnish material if she would make some shirts for the workmen. It was then suggested that some of the neighbors might wish to combine means and efforts with ours, and we decided to invite a few to come and consult with us on the subject of forming a Ladies' Society. The neighboring sisters met in my parlor and decided to organize. I was delegated to call on Sister Eliza R. Snow and ask her to write for us a constitution and by-laws and submit them to President Joseph Smith prior to our next Thursday's meeting. She cheerfully responded, and when she read them to him he replied that the constitution and by-laws were the best he had ever seen. "But," he said, "this is not what you want. Tell the sisters their offering is accepted of the Lord, and He has something better for them than a written constitution. Invite them all to meet me and a few of the brethren in the Masonic Hall over my store next Thursday afternoon, and I will organize the sisters under the priesthood after a pattern of the priesthood." He further said, "The Church was never perfectly organized until the women were thus organized."[2]

In accordance with this invitation, eighteen women gathered the next Thursday, March 17, 1842. The Prophet Joseph Smith brought with him Elder John Taylor, who later became the third President of the Church, and Elder Willard Richards, who later became a Counselor to Brigham Young in the Presidency of the Church. The brethren seated themselves on the platform at the upper end of the room, and facing them were eighteen attentive women.

The Prophet called Elder Taylor to the chair and appointed Elder Willard Richards to act as secretary. "The Spirit of God Like a Fire Is Burning" was sung, and Elder Taylor opened the meeting with prayer. The Prophet then began to organize the women present, who were:

Emma H. Smith	Bathsheba W. Smith
Sarah M. Cleveland	Phebe M. Wheeler
Phebe Ann Hawkes	Elvira A. Coles (Cowles) (later Mrs. Holmes)
Elizabeth Jones	Margaret A. Cook
Sophia Packard	Sarah M. Kimball
Philinda Merrick	Eliza R. Snow
Martha Knight	Sophia Robinson
Desdemona Fulmer	Sophia R. Marks
Elizabeth Ann Whitney
Leonora Taylor

In addition to the eighteen women present, the following women, not present, were also admitted to membership at this first meeting:

Sarah Higbee	Abigail Allred
Thirza Cahoon	Mary Snider
Keziah A. Morrison	Sarah S. Granger
Marinda N. Hyde	Cynthia A. Eldredge

President Joseph Smith addressed the sisters:

to illustrate the object of the Society—that the Society of Sisters might provoke the brethren to good works in looking to the wants of the poor—searching after objects of charity, and in administering to their wants—to assist by correcting the morals and strengthening the virtues of the community, and save the Elders the trouble of rebuking; that they may give their time to other duties, &c., in their public teaching.[3] that an organization to show them how to go to work would be sufficient. He propos'd that the Sisters elect a presiding officer to preside over them, and let that presiding officer choose two Counsellors to assist in the duties of her Office . . . and if they need his instruction, ask him, he will give it from time to time.

President Smith further remarked:

Let this Presidency serve as a constitution—all their decisions be considered law, and acted upon, as such.

If any Officers are wanted to carry out the designs of the Institution, let them be appointed and set apart.

The minutes of your meetings will be precedents for you to act upon—your Constitution and law.[4]

RISTENSEN, Olive Derbidge, a er of the General Board of Re-ociety from 1911 to 1913. (For

CLEVELAND, Sarah Marietta, a charter member of the Relief Society organized by the Prophet Joseph Smith, March 17, 1842, and first counselor to Emma Smith, the first president of the Female Relief Society in Nauvoo, Ill., was born Oct. 20, 1788, at Becket, Burkshire Co., Mass., a daughter of Ebenezer Kingsley. She was the wife of Judge John Cleveland of Nauvoo, who was never converted to "Mormonism." Sister Cleveland was an earnest worker in the Nauvoo Relief Society during its existence from 1842 to 1844; but when the saints were expelled from Nauvoo she remained there with her husband and family.

COWLES, Elvira A. (later Holmes), general treasurer of the Relief Society organized by the Prophet Joseph Smith at Nauvoo, Ill., March 17, 1842, was born Nov. 23, 1813, at Unadillo, N. Y., a daughter of Austin Cowles and Phebe Wilbur. She was sealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith and lived in his home to assist his wife Emma in her household duties. After the martyrdom of the Prophet, she was married to Jonathan H. Holmes, a former body guard to the Prophet. Her husband joined the Mormon Battalion, and she crossed the plains in Jedediah M. Grant's company and reached Great Salt Lake Valley in September, 1847. She remained for a time in the Old Fort, where she taught school, and after her husband's return from California they made their home in Farmington, where she again taught school, and died March 10, 1871. She was the mother of five children and also reared her husband's motherless daughter.

CRISMON, Elizabeth Turner, a member of the General Board of Relief Society from May 25, 1911, to April 2, 1921, was born April 14, 1849, in Salt Lake City, Utah, a daughter of Joseph Cain and Elizabeth Whitaker. From her youth she has been an active member of the Church as a Sunday School teacher and Relief Society worker. She was a charter member of the Utah Kindergarten Association and of the Authors' Club and was actively interested in the Relief Society Home for Women and Girls. In June, 1871, she was married to Charles Crismon, jun., and is the mother of six children. She has been an outstanding business woman, and during the long illness of her late husband, she supervised, most successfully, the business affairs of the family and of the company in which they were financially interested. (See also Biographical Encyclopedia Vol. 2, p. 612.)

DAVIS, Edna May, a member of the General Board of Relief Society from May 25, 1911, until her death, Nov. 14, 1919, was born Feb. 15, 1871, in Salt Lake City, Utah, a daughter of Albert W. Davis and Melissa Jane Lambson. She held various offices in the Center Ward in Salt Lake City, of which her father was Bishop for many years. Sister Davis was a member of the Temple Choir, and an ordinance worker in the Salt Lake Temple for seventeen years.

DUSENBERRY, Ida Smoot, a member of the General Board of Relief Society from 1901 to 1921, and a counselor in the presidency of that organization from 1901 to 1910, was born May 5, 1873, at Salt Lake City, Utah, a daughter of Abraham O. Smoot and Anna Kirstine Mouritsen. She is a graduate of the Brigham Young University, and of the Chauncey Hall College of Boston, and also did graduate work for three years at the Columbia University. She was principal of the Kindergarten Normal Training School at the B. Y. U. from 1910 to 1921, and has been assistant professor of psychology at the B. Y. U. since 1921. She was professor of psychology of the Floating University on a trip around the world in 1931. Sister Du-

CHILDREN OF RICHARD and ELIZABETH (MEAD) CLEVELAND

As of October 1992, the compiler of this material has no information on the following children of Richard Cleveland and his wife Elizabeth Mead (except for Milton W. and Isaac R.) other than what is printed below. He earnestly would like to secure more information on the children themselves, their spouses, and their descendants. If anyone reading this compilation is able to provide any leads or information, the compiler's name and address is: Richard B. Walker, 416 Rockhill Ave., Kettering, Ohio 45429-~~21628.~~ 2628.

I Milton Winthrop Cleveland, (the compiler has extensive information on descendants for this, his own line).

CHAPTER TWO
MILTON WINTHROP CLEVELAND FAMILY

Milton Winthrop Cleveland was a son and the oldest child of Richard and Betsy Cleveland. b. (14 August ?) 1819 in Oneida County, New York; m. 1854 Ruth Eastman Russell; d. 19 June 1901 aged 81 years 10 months and 5 days at Battle Creek, Michigan. Burial at Brooks Cemetery, Will County, Illinois. Milton moved to Chicago, Illinois, in 1844 and plied his trade of harness maker for about six years in Chicago, then for about four years more in Lemont, Illinois. In 1854 he settled on a 280 acre farm on 131st Street and engaged in farming and stock raising. There were eight children, five living at the time of his death. He served as School Trustee of the Town of Lemont, as Commissioner of Highways 1858-1860, and as Assessor 1855-1856.

Ruth Eastman Russell, daughter of Ira Otis and Betsey (Deering) Russell. b. 21 March 1833 at Dover, New Hampshire; m. 1854 Milton Winthrop Cleveland; d. 21 May 1922 at Middleville, Barry County, Michigan, buried at Brooks Cemetery, Will County, Illinois. She was a member of the Free-will Baptist Church. On 9 January 1918 she was declared incompetent and a conservator was appointed. Room and board was paid to Mrs. Ida Brown from March 1918 to August 1920, and then to Mrs. A. Cleveland [Margaret (Macauley) Cleveland, wife of Ruth's son Allen Elmer Cleveland] from September 1920 to April 1922. There were eight children, five of whom lived to maturity.

DESCENDANTS OF MILTON WINTHROP CLEVELAND AND RUTH EASTMAN RUSSELL

It has proved convenient and helpful to the compiler to put the descendants of ancestors in an outline form, using Roman Numerals to indicate the first generation of children, capital Arabic letters for the second generation, and so forth. He has been using the MacWrite 4.5 program on a Macintosh 512e computer to compile the information. As new information comes in from various sources it is very simple to add information or to make changes without having to re-do the whole document. For those who prefer another method of indicating the generations of descent, it should be relatively simple for them to make the transition to the form they prefer.

My grandmother, Lucinda Haywood, and her husband moved from Nova Scotia to Kansas. It is believed they left there due to small pox scare and moved to Muskoka (Ont.) where Grandpa was in a partnership on a sawmill. His partner was not honest so they moved to virgin land near Plumas, Manitoba. This was in 1888, and Grandmother was pregnant at the time. I assume that the parents and younger children went by train. But the two oldest, 11 +12, walked and drove the animals. They left Muskoka in March and arrived in Manitoba in October.

Grandpa Haywood had come from a wealthy British family. I do not know why he left England. — adventure I suppose.

Josiah Cleveland,[2] the fifth son and eighth child of Moses,[1] and Ann (Winn) Cleveland, was born in Woburn, Mass., February 26, 1667, and like his brother, Samuel,[2] settled in Chelmsford, Mass., removing later to Canterbury, Conn., where he resided till his death, April 26, 1709. There was only one white family in this place when he came there, about 1693–5. He had served in the Indian wars, was much respected by the other settlers in this place (first known as Plainfield), and was one of the thirty-eight who signed a petition to the General Court, Nov. 13, 1699, for "town powers and privileges." He was also one of the ten in a "committee of the oldest and most respected inhabitants" of the place, specially appointed to assume the jurisdiction of their territory, and reported the result at length, June 13, 1701. Canterbury, when separated from Plainfield in October, 1703, had but few inhabitants, only ten residents on the "west side" (of whom Josiah Cleveland,[2] was one) signing the articles of separation. He married in Chelmsford, Mass., in 1689, Miss Mary Bates, a daughter of John Bates, a cooper by occupation. She was born in Chelmsford, May 8, 1667.

Governor Bradford was among the 101 Puritans who landed at Plymouth Rock in 1620. And by April 1621 all but 46 were dead; It was Governor Bradford and the 45 others who first had Thanksgiven day. Among Governor Bradfords writtings (he was historians of the Puritains), he tells us the population did not increase much after 1630, in fact very few emigrants came to New England states after that date, and during the single winter of 1629 more than two hundred of the Massachusetts settlers died not counting those who died in other settlements of New England. Such was the terror inspired by sickness and other causes that more than one hundred returned to England from Massachusetts alone. In tracing family histories of the New England descendents we find so many families of Puritans related, due to the fact that they were so isolated from the southern English settlements. Most all New Englanders settled there between 1620 to 1630, and very very few after 1640; they were a hardy lot to stand the awful severe New England winters. The New Englanders left to themselves sort become a race of people by themselves; and still are, their Puritan ideas make them a different people from the other people of U.S.. After the Revolutionary war a great many of the younger people left the New England states for the wilderness of Western New York. and in the meantime the emigrants from the old world were landing at New York city and southern points.

I. Moses Cleveland is the common ancestor of all the Clevelands of New England origin; and in America all sons as well as the oldest son kept the name Cleveland, not spelling it any other way as was done by other than the oldest son in England. (One family of Clevelands in New England tryed spelling it with a after the first e but they soon stopped it.) In America all sons are considered equal.

William Bradford (William was a descendent of the Bradfords of Bradford Yorkshire) of Austerfield Yorkshire England, on William married in 1590 Alice Hanson a daughter of John Hanson. Their son Hon. William Bradford born in Austerfield England — went to Holland in 1607 with Rev. John Robinson, John Carver and other Puritans. In Sept. 1620 they left the old world for America, and landed at Plymouth Rock. They came in the Mayflower. A year after Hon. Bradford was chosen Governor of the Puritans an office he held from 1621 — 1657. On August 14-1623 he married Mrs. Alice (Carpenter) Southworth, she was born in England 1591. — her first husband a Puritan was Major Southworth. Governor Bradford and Alice his wife, son William married Alice Richards she was a daughter of Thomas and Alice (Welthean) Richards who had come to America from England, the Richards were among the best families of Somerset and Dover England. The Weltheans were also a fine family. William and Alice (Richards) Bradfords daughter Alice Bradford married Major James Fitch, the Rev. Wm. Adams the was Alice Bradford second husband, her first husband was the son from the Pilgrim adams. This is the family the 2 adams, 2 presidents of U.S. before G.

The Bradford-Richards — Fitch great coat of arms is very fine.

2. The Fitch ancestry — Sir Thomas & Lady Fitch from a long line of gentry in Great Britain, were of Saxon origin; their son Rev. James Fitch born in Essex* County in England Dec-24-1622 came to America when he was a mere boy; with 14 other boys, to study for the Puritan ministry with the Rev. Mr. Hooker of Hartford A few years later, he became the first pastor of Saybrook remaining there 14 years. When Major John Mason and about 36 other Puritan men wished to form a colony of Puritans on the Thames river in Conn., Rev. Fitch went with them: He later married Priscilla Mason and after being pastor of Norwich for 40 years, he gave up his pastoral duties, under the infirmity of age & weakness, retiring to his children at Lebanon, where he died Nov, 18-1702 age 80 years. There is a Latin epitaph on his tombstone at Lebanon Conn. A copy of Rev. Fitchs sermon on the death of Ann, wife of Major Mason, is preserved in the pastors library of the first church in Norwich. A copy of an election sermon by Rev. Fitch, preached in 1674, is in the college library at New Haven. The Connecticut historical society has a love letter written by Rev. Edward Taylor of Westfield Mass., July 1674., to Miss Elizabeth Fitch daughter of Rev. James Fitch (I have a printed copy of the letter). One of Rev. Fitchs sons was a college president of Harvard 1693 Rev. Fitch descendents are in N.Y. state, N. Jersey, Delaware & Pennsilvania & other parts of U.S., a great many of them are still in N. England states One in Florida — Billy Cleveland

The Mason ancestry.

Major John Mason was born 1600 at Hampshire county Southern part of England, he named the state of New Hampshire amnica.
in England, he served in the low ountries under Sir Thomas Fairfax, with the rank of lieutenant, uring the civil wars in England at the time of the commonwealth, reat distinguished general invited Mason; his comrade in arms join him in England as the associate of the ablest officers and ost resolute soldiers that England has ever seen. Mason had een a traveler before coming to America; in boyhood he traveled rough British isles: a youth he crossed the channel & trod the ntinent: a man he traversed New England. He was one of the rly, although probaly not the first settlers of Dorchester, Mass., hich was founded 1630. He was on the committee for selecting tes for fortifications in Boston harbor, and himself had charge of the ection of the works on Castle Island, an important point; he was ngaged in a hazardous eppedition for the capture of a band of irates under a desperate leader by the name of Bull; the pirates ere dispersed, and the general court ordered that £10 should be aid to lieutenant Mason for his services. He was the hero the Pequot war. We are all familiar with the exploits of ajor John Mason. They form a stirring chapter in the history
New England, which is tought in all our common schools.
Major Mason lived at Saybrook, before he with 34 other men, ought from chief Uncas the Mohegan indian, a tract of land miles square on the Thames river in Conn. for a colony of Britans. In 1659 - about 37 full grown men, and most of them arried and had families - in all there was about 6 score of people with Rev. James Fitch their pastor, they called the settlement Norwich Conn. Rev. Fitch and Major Mason were the leaders of the infant settlement.

This list of original settlers of Norwich Conn. was taken in 1844 after a long examination of the original records by Rev. E.B. Huntington of 1659

Later Norwich was the home of the Waites, who were early settlers of New England. It is interesting to find that the son of Miles Standish & the son of Governor Bradford the grandchildren of elder Brewster, the niece of Governor Winslow & others of Pilgrim fame at Plymouth, were early settlers of Norwich Conn.. Thomas Tracy was the ancestor of the late Judge Tracy of Batavia N.Y.; Francis Griswold was the ancestor of Batavia Griswolds. — You have 4 on the list J. Royce., J. Mason, J. Fitch & Bradford.

In the infant settlement next to the meeting house was the home lot of Rev Fitch, across the road was the land of Major Mason — on which the old court house stood in 1858 —. on the road between Bean Hill & the Thames river was the lands of Waterman, Bingham, Post, Birchard, Wade Bowers, Gager, Thomas Post, Edgerton, Backus, Calkins, Griswold, Allyn, Royce, Baldwin, Tracy, & Pease. Several of these homesteads have never been deeded since 1658–1658 and remained in the possession of the original families, although in some such cases the name of the first proprietor has disappeared, the property passing to the female line. On one such house is the motto Bliss in 1659; Bliss in 1859. The S. Huntingtons, Thomas Tracy, C. Huntington were east of the meeting house, and on the road running south were Adgate, Hlmstead, Backus, Bliss, Reynolds, & Thomas Leffingwell. In 1858 a large monument was erected at Yantic cemetary in memory of Major Mason. it was quite a celebration for Norwich. Millard Fillmore, Governor Buckingham and others of note — all descendants of early settlers of Norwich were present at the 200th anniversary of the settlement.

The above is a copy from a book "The Nowich Jubilee". And I e the Cleveland family will get in touch with Norwich Conn.
o that if a 1959 Jubilee is held the Clevelands will be there, or they are direct descendants of both Rev. Fitch and Major Mason.

Major Mason was 60 years old when he settled Norwich, he ived there 12 years. He died Jan-30-1672- age 72. buried at antic Cemetary, Norwich Conn.

The general courts in appreciation of Mason's services, made to im at different times, grants of considerable tracts of land, to two

On the 5th of June 1641, it was ordered "that captain Mason shall lso the island commonly called Chipsachauge (now Masons island) i Mystic bay. a portion of this island was still owned and ccupied by the descendants of Mason in 1859.

There has been a great many poems written about Major ason both here in America and in England.

Letters, books, newspapers, wearing apparel, furniture and other hings used by Bradfords, Fitches, & Masons will be found in museums f Boston and Norwich, as well as powder horns, muskets and swords
sed by Norwich men in the French and Indian and Revolutionary wars Among these things is a sword carried by Mason through the equot war.

In 1844 Chancellor Walworth of Conn. had for 4 years been engaged i preparing a very extended genealogical history of the ancestors & descendants f the first male child of Norwich, William Hyde, embracing among hers the Richards, Waites and Griswolds. Other genealogical Capt. William Cleveland served as capt. in French and Indian ars 1756 - 1763. Capt. Cleveland and family emigrated from ansfield Conn. in 1755 to Dalton Mass., he was a farmer and iller. He was a pioneer of Windsor Mass., attracted by the fine ater power, when the country was a wilderness. Here he built first mill and started it about 1760. Cut into the two stones hat are left of the mill are these words. William Cleveland uilt this mill 1760.

Rachel (Warren) Cleveland ancestry is very good. Warrens were uritans, both Haines and Warrens were from old English family nes was often spelt Haynes. If you will read New England histories, you will see how like these two milies were.

Henry Cleveland born Mansfield Conn. Jan 4 - 1744, married in ec. 25 - 1772 at Dalton Mass., Elizebeth born Rhode Island 1748, aughter of Jasper Royce.

If you will note, these children were born during the volutionary war period.

Henry Cleveland and family dwelt at Dalton and was a farmer. He was an officer in the Revolutionary war. His great-grand son Cleazar Blackman Cleveland – older brother of William Henry of East Pembroke –. remembered the sword and horse pistols carried by Henry Cleveland in the Revolutionary war.

Elizabeth (Royce) Clevelands ancestors were early puritans from England, they lived in Mass. Conn. & Rhode Island. they apparently follow Roger Williams into Rhode Island. Their genealogy can be found at Norwich Conn.

VI. Arron Cleveland born Dalton Mass. 1774, married Mrs. Lydia (Warren) Wright. she was born at Sturbridge Mass. 1762, and was the daughter of Stephen and Eltheria (Bugbee) Warren. She was the widow of Jonathan Wright, they had two children Mary and Simon Wright.

I think it was Lydia Cleveland's father, the Stephen Warren killed in the war.

Arron Cleveland and family resided at Dalton Mass., he was a farmer. Lydia (Warren) Cleveland was married to Jonathan Wright in 1785 – Wright children born – Mary 1786 – Simon 1787, year Jonathan died; Married Arron Cleveland 1788. If you look back you will find Arron Cleveland is the grandson of William and Rachel (Warren) Cleveland; Lydia (Warren) Cleveland and Arron Cleveland were distantly related, but distant enough to be married by puritan laws. which were rather strict. at the library they tell me J. Wright was most likely in Revolutionary war, which was the result of his death. at library they are quite positive of it and which accounts for the second child being named for J. Wright. Also if you read history of Revolutionary war times you will find the hardships of those days especially from 1772 to 1800 were terrible. and boys were men and men were scarce. and a young women with two children was in a very hard situation. And the marriage was most likely urged by Warren and Cleveland relatives. It was at a time young men were running away and wandering into the western wilderness, joining indian tribes trying to get away from the terrible hardships at their homes. All in all it was at a most

It is easy to be seen Jonathan and Abigail Cleveland ere interested in genealogy, she kept track of her own, nd gave her children family names, from both her side, nd the Clevelands.

The Blackman genealogy is very good and can be gotten i N. England libarys; on request, for all those books are ept under lock and key. they are very valuable, as all amily records are.

Its the trying times the young folks & their parents went through for our country at that time, that gives their descendents the urge to look up the family records. For those of us, that are descendents of the soldiers of the Revolutionary war. have something to be very proud of. Our people made U.S. and made it what it is. We should be very proud of the fact Our ancestors did the work, the late comers to America are coming in for the cream. They have our ancestors to thank, for this U.S. Perhaps you know after reading this far, that you & family can belong to the society of the Pilgram Fathers, Colonial sons & daughters & the Revolutionary war sons & daughters. 3 of the highest honors in U.S. and you will realize the Moses Cleveland family have lived in America over 300 years 1635-to-1935 was 300 years. And if you will look around at other families you will also realize there is not many families in America that can come anywhere near that record. You surely are a real American.

The late President Grover Cleveland was a descendent of Moses Cleveland as was also (—) Cleveland she married Dodge, the 1st of the Auto Dodges. Bishop Arthur Cleveland Cox; Rev. Richard Cleveland; General Moses Cleveland of Ohio — Cleveland Ohio was named in his honor, were descendents, and Aaron Cleveland a son of one of the Aarons was a great friend of Benjamin Franklins, in whose house in Philadelphia he died in 1757 while visiting there. And at the time of Sullivans raid, Lieut. Cleveland with some other Revolutionary war officers were stationed at the fort at the head of Canandaigua Lake, in the wilderness (1789) In 1805 & 1809 some of Moses C. descendents were in Batavia, N.Y. Ephraim, Simon & Clark Cleveland. During the early days about 1650 a Cleveland boy about age 2, was stolen by Indians of what is now N.Y. state; he was playing in the yard at the time; his relatives searched for him for years; about 6 years later, a white boy was seen in an Indian Camp by some New Englanders, he looked so much like the Cleveland, they were sure it was he, but the child could not speak or understand English; and by the time a searching party got there the Indians, had hid the boy. He was seen again, when he had become a man. (He was the lost boy) But he by that time had an Indian family. And now all trace of him is lost. But there is some Cleveland blood now in some of the N.Y. State Indians I think it was the Senecas or Mohawks.

The Clevelands of LeRoy N.Y., are also descendents of Moses Cleveland, Dr. Cleveland built his home in LeRoy on the west bank of the creek on the south side of Main St., in the business section, a beautiful place (the place just east of Murdock's antique shope) I could tell you more of Clevelands, but you would enjoy reading of them yourself at the library in D.C., Those volumes must be in the Albany & Buffalo libraries, for Grover Cleveland was at one time governor of New York state, & at another time Major of Buffalo N.Y. (thats when he used to spend week-ends at your great-grandfathers farm at E. Pembroke N.Y., for they were business men

At the close of the Revolutionary war, N.Y. state was very little settled just in fact along the Hudson & Mohawk rivers, In 1800 young married people knowing of the cheapness of W.N.York lands, they began to move in from New England states, This of course was after Sullivans raid on the Seneca Indians of W.N.Y., I have a list of the early settlers, here is a few who settled west of Genesee river between 1800–1836. William & Hiram Blackman, John Haines, John Warren, James Brisbane, Silas Chapin, Ebenezer Cary, Thimothy Washburn, James Holden, Jabez Warren, Elisha Adams, Job Phillips, Nathan Miner, The Richmonds, Elisha Carver, Gideon Rogers, Daniel Bates, the Days, Tracy, Wm Alden, William Rogers, Henry Arnold, the Harmons, Jared Griswold, Thomas Phillips, Joseph Phillips, The Wiates, John Weaver, Enos Armstrong, Daniel Redfield, Amos Huntington, Erastus Richards, Alfread Dodge, Joseph Franklin, Reuben Peck, Daniel Peck, William Weaver, H. Mateuman, John Thatcher, James Bates, Josiah Carpenter, Some of the Fitch's & Mason families. If you will notice most of these names were well known in New England states. The Clevelands settled in East Pembroke N.Y. in 1832.

I was not able to get their birth dates, it was time for library to close, if you are ever in Washington D. C. you could get them. These children were all born at E. Pembroke N.Y.

William Clevelands father cleared the land on what is the Cleveland homestead farm on the road from Batavia to Buffalo (Old Indian Trail) N.Y., and William was born on the present homestead in a log cabin on Oct-28-1836., he attended the district school and always pursued the business of farming. William and Lydia (Peck) Cleveland built the present beautiful Cleveland home on the site of the old homestead.

Lydia (Peck) Cleveland ancestors were. (Peck is Peek in old English language)

The Peck family emigrated from England to America, Daniel Peck was a Revolutionary soldier, his son Daniel Peck came from Sand Lake in Rensilaer County N.Y. in 1830 and settled near E. Pembroke. He had married Hannah daughter of Ward Woodward she died - Daniel married again, his second wife was Bathsheba daughter of Rueben Gould - Daniel had 12 children in all. The eldest son William born in Sand Lake N.Y. in 1811 was educated in the schools of his day, he came with his parents to E. Pembroke when a young man, and in 1837 married Celinda Kyckerman, they had three children Joel, Lydia and Franklin. His son Joel Peck married Lizzie Crowfod, they had one only daughter, Lydia Peck who married William Henry Cleveland, a farmer near her home at E. Pembroke N.Y.

William and Lydia Clevelands son Nelson W. was born on the old Cleveland homestead farm at E. Pembroke. and Married Alice Waite daughter of Jerome and Eliza (Phillips) Waite of East Pembroke N.Y., Nelson Cleveland and

Alice (Waite) Cleveland resided in Buffalo N.Y. where their three owned & operated a milk dairy hildren Arthur, Florence and Raymond were born. The family moved o Batavia N.Y. where Nelson Cleveland operated the "Cleveland Ice Co.", is two sons assisting him in the business. Nelson Cleveland was ne of the City of Batavia counselmen for over a period of several he name was Wyate. Later the puritans spelled it Waite, the e is sually droped now. When England was ruled by Queen Mary in 553, there were terrible religious wars, in which Sir Thomas Wyat Waite) of Kent, a man of great daring was the leader of the people gainst the Queen. Sir Wyat was defeated and hanged. It was uring Bloody Queen Mary's time, the puritans of England began to ok for another place to live. The Waits lived first in Mass. and en in Conn. after leaving England. then we find them in Washington unty at Cambridge N.Y., and at Sand Lake Rensellar County N.Y., from ere some pushed into the western N.Y. wilderness stopping at West oomfield in 1790, that being the frontier at the time, kept at LeRoy in 32 where Richard Waite built and settled on what is now the P.C.

throp place. He was an exemplary Christian (same as his ancestor Sir Wyat) fter the erection of his log cabin, opened it for Sunday worships, whenever supply of people from the wilderness could be found for its occupancy.
in those days the pioneer had to come on foot through the mud attend services. He was the father of Daniel D. Waite, the editor of e Advocate at Batavia; and his son Rev. Wait had charge of the ethodist church at Alexander N.Y. Richard Wait died there in 1857. Another mber of the Waite family was Judge Waite of Bethany an early ttler of Genesee County - He represented Genesee County in Assembly, his ughter married into the Ford family and lived in Batavia — old
rs. Tarbox who lived in the house at the south east corner of East ain and Swan sts. Batavia, was a Ford, her son living in N.Y. City is ed Tarbox. Mrs. Tarbox's ancestors came from around Norwich Conn.
nd you all have some of the same connections.
When settlements were made in the wilderness several families members of the same family, would locate in a neighborhood e we have in Darien N.Y., the Waite Settlement and others, r that the neighborhoods, with their appropriate names, retain their early disignations to the present time. The main famil in "Waite Settlement" were Russell and Zina Waite. Zina was bo in Washington County;- married Rebecca Buchanan, and brought his homestead at Darien in 1824. He had a son Horace who was in polit and a son Cyrus a farmer. Cyrus had an only son Charles who wen to Buffalo and was a merchant there.

Russell Waite of the "Waite Settlement" was born in Washington County 1787, located about 1804 on a farm in Darien then included in Batavia. In 1811 he married Mercy Booth from Cambridge Washing County N.Y., He resided on the farm in Darien until his death in 1854. He was strong and healthy, and a hard worker, he was no for his honesty and fair dealings was generous to the poor and need and was especially liberal to the Baptist church, of which he wa a member. His first wife was the mother of his 15 children, she died in 1835. Russell Waite married twice after his first wifes dea the second wife died 1842. The third one survived him.- 4 sons an six daughters survived their father, all of whom were married.

Jerome B. Waite born at Waite Settlement, Darien, July 8- 1833- Married Eliza Phillips, daughter of Ira C. Phillips, and wife born in N.Y. state His father Ira Phillips born in N.Y. state settled in East Pembroke in 1840 on the farm later known as the Waite farm, it was next to the William H. Cleveland farm (east). Ira Phillips took part in th Holland Land Office War of Genesee County in 1834. Ira Phillips was a contractor, built railroads and canals, and owned a farm of 225 acres, leasing some to his son E.M. Phillips.

Jerome and Eliza (Phillips) Waite occupied the Phillips farm later, and it became known as the Waite farm. They had two children Erwin and Alice. Eliza (Phillips) Waite died, and Jerome Waite married Harriet Hall she died before Jerome Waite He died at the Waite farm in January 1913. The Waites and Russell Waite's fam are buried at the old North Darien cemetary next to near the Waite settlement. I have a picture of the farm & cemetery, taken in 1875, it had nearly 300 graves then. It was the Waite private cemetary, & of course the families they married into were buried there too. I think it has now been Deeded to Darien The cemetery had a massive wall around it, and some ornamental tree in it, its rather nice, & contained 200 & 60 rods of dry land. The Cleveland are buried at the Pembroke cemetery.

1. Florence Cleveland daughter of Nelson and Alice (Waite) Cleveland married Theo. Webster, who lived near her fathers home in Batavia N.Y. they have two children Carlton and Lynn Webster. The Websters ancestors were from England & were early settlers of New England states, & they are from the same family as Noah Webster. 2. Raymond Cleveland son of Nelson & Alice Cleveland, married Hazel Harmon of Batavia N.Y. they have 3 children Robert, Donald, and Arlene. Hazel (Harmon) Clevelands mother was a Cooley. Her grandmother a Moulton, first of the settlers in Alexander N.Y., from New England states. The Moultons are from Moulton the ship builder, about the first ship builder in New England; he married into the John & Priscilla Alden family.

These two families live in the Nelson Cleveland houses on Chestnut St. Batavia N.Y. The eldest son of Nelson & Alice (Waite) Cleveland.

Arthur & Marjorie Cleveland ad one child.

. William Ronald Cleveland born Batavia N.Y. Oct. 23/1917 one years will follow.

Arthur Cleveland was connected with the "Cleveland Ice Company," Arthur nd Marjorie Cleveland lived on Chestnut St. Batavia N.Y. In one of Nelson Clevelands houses. Arthur Clevelands father owned and furnished houses, r each of his children, when they married, and old custom in the Cleveland mily, handed down from one generation to another, from ancient times in ngland. Marjorie (Ewart) Clevelands parents lived in the Ewart home at 7 East Main St. Batavia. The house was originally built for one of the early inisters of Batavia, and was later bought by W. J. Ewart and was here the Ewart family was raised. William R. Cleveland was also raised at 557.

. William Ronald Cleveland born Batavia N.Y., Oct, 1917, married august 1938, t Tampa Florida, Dorothy Egg, born Tenn. 19—; daughter of Dr & Mrs. alter Egg of Tennessee & Florida.

William R. Cleveland was brought up by his grandparents at the wart home on East Main St. Batavia, from the time he was 5 months old. e attended East School & High School in Batavia. His Uncle & Aunt rant & Isabel (Ewart) Harper were his foster parents. W.J. Ewart died in tavia N.Y. July 2-1928. and from that time on, he was under the care the Harpers. William R.C. worked at Riders Drug store in Batavia and ter for his Uncle Ronald William Ewart of the Cyclone Fence Co. of Buffalo N.Y.

illiam Ronald Clevelands grandmother Ewarts maiden name was t Esther Tynen, her grandfather Armstrong was a graduate of Oxford lege of England. He came to America and taught school. at one time le Ridge N.Y. in the early days of Genesee County. He was also an tist, his grandaughter Harriet Tynen taught drawing & painting in Rochester N.Y. at the studio for young ladies, in the Powers Block and at an old seminary, corner of Livingston Park and Spring St. Rochester. Her ancestors the Tyrens lived at the big bend in the Tyne river in the northern part of England. They came to America about 115 years ago & settled in the northern part of N.Y. state on the shore of Lake Ontario near the St. Lawrence river. W.R. Clevelands grandfather Ewarts great grandfather Ewart came to America from Dumfries Scotland, they were Normans who had settled in the Lowlands of Scotland. In America some of the Ewarts settled in Livingston County N.Y.. W.J.'s, our grandfather settled in East Ont. Canada. W.J. Ewarts mother was a daughter of Rev. Thomas Gadd born England, who came to U.S. and married into the Revolutionary war Weaver family, of the Mohawk valley N.Y., The Weavers ancestors were the very first settlers Newburg on the Hudson river back in the 16 hundreds (1682. Rev. Gadd & family later lived in Ont. Canada were he had been called to preach. and who his daughter Emily married Robert Sanderson Ewart. — W.J. Ewart was their son Robert S. Ewart mothers maiden name was Agnes Sanderson, daughter of Archie who owned a very large iron foundry in Canada. Roberts father & mother, William John & Agnes (Sanderson) Ewart had 4 sons & 3 daughters and all had the name Sanderson for their middle name.

Colonel Aaron Cleveland,[4] fifth son and tenth child of Josiah[3] and Abigail (Paine) Cleveland, was born in Canterbury, Conn., November 27, 1727. He served as captain in the French and Indian war, and in the winter of 1756-7, was with his command at Fort Edward. He was one of the wealthiest men in Canterbury, and well-known throughout New England in business and political circles, and bore a conspicuous part in the Revolutionary struggle as a gallant soldier and meritorious officer. He was present at the time of Governor Tryon's assault upon Horse-neck, and saw "General Putnam plunge down the steep bluff, the bullets of the baffled dragoons whizzing around him, and even passing through his hat." (Larned's History Windham County, Conn., Vol. II, p. 191.) He lived to see the war brought to a successful close, and died of apoplexy, in his native town, April 14, 1785, much lamented. The monument that marks his grave in the old cemetery has quite an elaborate inscription upon it.

He married in Canterbury, June 7, 1748, Miss Thankful Paine, daughter of Elisha Paine, Jr., by whom he had a family of ten children. She survived her husband many years and died September 30, 1822, at the age of 89.

General Moses Cleveland,[5] second son and child of Colonel Aaron[4] and Thankful (Paine) Cleveland, was born in Canterbury, Conn., January 29, 1754, and died there November 16, 1806, in his fifty-third year. A graduate of Yale College in 1777, and a member of the Windham County bar; a soldier and patriot of the war of the Revolution; a stockholder in the Western Reserve Land Company, of which he had been unanimously selected as the active agent and financier. He was a prominent Mason, and held the position of Grand Marshall of the Grand Lodge of Connecticut. He was made general of the Fifth brigade in 1796, after rising rapidly through the subordinate grades. Though not able to give much attention to the practice of his profession in the law, he could direct others, and many young men studied in his office. He married in Canterbury, Conn., March 21, 1794, Miss Esther Champion, daughter of Henry Champion, Esq.

GENERAL MOSES CLEAVELAND.

In attempting to solve the problem of life, General Moses Cleaveland had a purpose and lived for a purpose. In his career, though controlled by circumstances, he manifested an unusual degree of wisdom and foresight. Among other achievements he founded a city—the beautiful city that inherits his name and cherishes his memory with a pride that approaches reverence.

His ancestry is of historical interest, and has been traced to a remote period. The name "Cleaveland" is shown to be of Saxon origin, and was the name of a distinguished family in Yorkshire, England, before the Norman conquest. This family originally occupied an extensive landed estate that was singularly marked by open fissures in its rocky soil, known to the Saxons as "clefts" or "cleves." This peculiarity of the estate induced the rural population of the vicinity to speak of its occupants as the "Clefflands," a name which the family accepted. This name like many others, as time elapsed, came to be spelled in a variety of ways—Clefland, Clifland, Cleiveland, Cleaveland, Cleveland. An antiquarian of repute states that William Cleveland, of York, England, who died at Hinckley, in Leicestershire, in 1630, was the remote ancestor of the American Clevelands. It is also shown that a lineal descendant of his, whose name was Moses, and who was a housewright or builder by trade, emigrated from England and landed at Boston in the year 1635, where he remained for several years. He then, in connection with Edward Winn and others, founded the town of Woburn, Mass., where both he and Winn permanently settled.

This Moses Cleveland was a man of intelligence and enterprise. He aspired to full citizenship, and became, in 1643, what was then called a "freeman." The qualifications of a freeman required that he should be of "godly walk and conversation, at least twenty-one years of age, take an oath of allegiance to the government of Massachusetts Bay Colony, be worth £200, and consent to hold office if elected, or pay a fine of forty shillings, and vote at all elections or pay the same fine." These restrictions and conditions were so onerous that many who were eligible preferred not to become freemen, being more free as they were. But this Moses, who had now become a freeman, feeling that he had ancestral blood in his veins of a superior quality, thought that it ought to be transmitted, and after a brief courtship married, in 1648, Anne Winn, the daughter of his friend, Edward Winn of Woburn. In taking this step "Moses" did not make a "mistake." The result was that he became the accredited progenitor of all the Clevelands born in the United States—a race not only numerous, but noted for great moral worth and many noble traits of character.

General Moses Cleaveland, the subject of this sketch, was born January 29, 1754, in the town of Canterbury, Windham County, and State of Connecticut. He was the second son of Colonel Aaron Cleaveland, who married Thankful Paine. Both his father and mother were persons of culture. They saw promising traits of character in their son Moses when he was but a child, and resolved to give him a liberal education. At the proper age they sent him to Yale College, where he graduated in 1777. He then adopted the legal profession, and commenced the practice of law in his native town with marked success. The abilities of the young lawyer soon attracted public attention, and induced Congress to recognize his merits by appointing him, in 1779, captain of a company of sappers and miners in the army of the United States. He accepted the commission, and remained in the service for several years, when he resigned and resumed the practice of law. He was also a prominent Mason and held the position of Grand Marshall of the Grand Lodge of Connecticut. He was several times elected a member of the State Legislature, and in this capacity acquired an enviable reputation as a statesman. In 1794, he married Esther Champion, a young lady of rare accomplishments, and the daughter of Henry Champion. Early in 1796, after having risen rapidly through the subordinate military grades, he was advanced to the generalship of the Fifth Brigade of the State militia.

In regard to the subsequent career of General Cleaveland, it should be remembered that Connecticut, when a colony, acquired by grant of King Charles II. of England, in 1662, a vast tract of territory lying between the same parallels with the colony, and extending west from "sea to sea," or from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. When Connecticut was admitted into the Union as a State, she claimed this territory as her rightful domain. In adjusting this claim, Congress allowed her to retain only that part of the territory now known as the "Western Reserve." This she accepted in full discharge of her claim.

The Western Reserve embraces the northeastern part of Ohio, and contains three millions and eight hundred thousand acres. In 1792 the State donated five hundred thousand acres of this land, since known as the "Fire-lands," to citizens who had suffered by fire in the Revolution; and, in 1795, authorized a sale of the remaining part of the Reserve and appointed a committee to effect the sale. This remainder was sold within a few months for $1,200,000, which the State appropriated as a permanent fund for the support of her common schools. The purchasers of the land were sundry wealthy citizens known as the "Connecticut Land Company." The individuals comprising the Company held different shares, and with a view to convenience in the transaction of business, conveyed their respective interests to three trustees, John Cadwell, John Morgan and Jonathan Brace. In accordance with articles of agreement entered into by the Land Company, the general management of its affairs was confided to a board of seven directors, Oliver Phelps, Henry Champion, Moses Cleaveland, Samuel W. Johnson, Ephraim Kirby, Samuel Mather, Jr., and Roger Newbury. On the twelfth day of May, 1796, the following commission was issued by the board of directors to Moses Cleaveland, who was a shareholder in the Land Company:

To Moses Cleaveland, Esq., of the County of Windham and State of Connecticut, one of the directors of the Connecticut Land Company. Greeting:

We, the Board of Directors of said Company, having appointed you to go on to said land as superintendent over the agents and men sent to survey and make locations on said land, and to make and enter into friendly negotiations with the natives who are on said land, or contiguous thereto, and may have any pretended claim to the same, and secure such friendly intercourse amongst them as will establish peace, quiet and safety to the survey and settlement of said lands not ceded by the natives under the authority of the United States.

You are hereby, for the foregoing purposes, fully authorized and empowered to act and transact all the above business in as full and ample a manner as we ourselves could do; to make contracts on the foregoing matters in our behalf and stead, and make such drafts on our treasury as may be necessary to accomplish the foregoing object of your appointment. And all agents and men by us employed and sent to survey and settle said lands, to be obedient to your orders and directions; and you are to be accountable for all moneys by you received, conforming your conduct to such orders and directions as we may from time to time give you, and to do and act in all matters according to your best skill and judgment, which may tend to the best interest, prosperity and success of said Connecticut Land Company, having more particularly for your guide the Articles of Association entered into and signed by the individuals of said company. Dated at Hartford this 12th day of May, 1796.

OLIVER PHELPS,
HENRY CHAMPION,
ROGER NEWBURY,
SAMUEL MATHER, JR.,
} Directors.

Thus commissioned, General Cleaveland led the first surveying and exploring party into the wilds of the Western Reserve, or "New Connecticut," as it was then called. The entire party consisted of General Cleaveland, agent of the Land Company; Augustus Porter, principal surveyor; Seth Pease, astronomer and surveyor; Moses Warren, Amos Spafford, John M. Holley and Richard M. Stoddard, assistant surveyors; Joshua Stow, commissary; Theodore Shepard, physician; Joseph Tinker, boatman, and Seth Hart, chaplain, accompanied by thirty-seven employes and a few immigrants. There were but two women in the party. They were married women who came with their husbands. The whole party numbered just fifty. They brought with them thirteen horses and several head of horned cattle.

The individuals composing the expedition concentrated at Schenectady, N. Y., early in June, 1796. A few took charge of the horses and cattle and proceeded by land through the interior wilds of the State to Buffalo, while the others procured boats and ascended the Mohawk River, and when they reached Fort Stanwix, now Rome, transferred their boats from the Mohawk over the portage to Wood Creek, passed down the creek to Oneida Lake, thence across the lake and its outlets, and down the Oswego River to Lake Ontario. From this point they coasted along the south shore of Ontario to the mouth of the Niagara River, thence up that river to Queenstown, and after crossing the "seven mile" portage reached Chippewa, and from thence pursued their way along the Niagara River and shore of Lake Erie to Buffalo, where they were met by the detachment having charge of the horses and cattle. Here General Cleaveland found a delegation of Seneca and Mohawk Indians, headed by Red Jacket and Colonel Brant, who had been awaiting his arrival, with a determination to oppose the further progress of the expedition to the Western Reserve, claiming that it was territory which rightfully belonged to them. The Indians consented to hold a "talk" with the general, who succeeded in quieting the claim by making them a donation of goods, valued at twelve hundred dollars. The expedition then continued westward along the southeastern shore of Lake Erie, and landed, on the fourth of July, 1796, at the mouth of Conneaut Creek, in the Western Reserve, and on landing gave "three deafening cheers" and christened the place "Port Independence."

It was a pleasant day. The party felt patriotic, and resolved to celebrate not only the day but the event. They flung the American flag to the breeze. Tables were extemporized and made to groan under the weight of a superabundance of baked pork and beans and other luxuries, all of which were partaken of with a keen relish. Salutes were fired by platoons of musketry, speeches were made and several pails of grog were drank in response to the following toasts or sentiments: 1. "The President of the United States." 2. "The State of New Connecticut." 3. "The Connecticut Land Company." 4. "May the Port of Independence and the fifty sons and daughters who have entered it this day be successful and prosperous." 5. "May these sons and daughters multiply in sixteen years sixteen times fifty." 6. "May every person have his bowsprit trimmed and ready to enter every port that opens."

The celebration was prolonged until the stars appeared. It was the first of the kind that had occurred in the Western Reserve. At its close the hilarious "fifty" retired to their boats and tents in as good order as could be expected. The next day was devoted to the erection of a log structure or two, designed for the immediate accommodation of the party and their supplies. The Indians in the vicinity now became inquisitive, and demanded to know why it was the white men had encroached upon their domains. A council was called and the central seat assigned to General Cleaveland as the great white chief. Proceedings were commenced by gravely smoking the "pipe of peace." Cato, the son of the old Indian Chief, Piqua, then addressed the Great White Chief, who, in his reply, conciliated the Indians by giving them a few glass beads and a keg of whiskey. The surveys were then allowed to proceed. The general assigned to each detachment of surveyors their special work, and told them where to commence it.

In the course of two weeks after this General Cleaveland left Conneaut in company with a select few of his staff, and coasted in an open boat along the southeastern shore of Lake Erie until he came to the mouth of a river, which he took to be the Cuyahoga. He ascended the stream for some distance, amid many embarrassments arising from sandbars and fallen trees, when he discovered his mistake, and found that it was a shallow river of minor importance and not noted on his map. This perplexity and delay so chagrined him and his staff that he named the river "Chagrin," a designation by which it is still known, and continuing his voyage entered the mouth of the veritable Cuyahoga on the twenty-second of July, in the same ever memorable year of 1796, and landed on its eastern bank near its entrance into the lake. He at once with his staff ascended the steep bank, and beheld for the first time an elevated plain of surprising beauty that extended far away to the east, west and south of him, and that was clad with a luxuriant growth of graceful forest trees. The scene charmed his eye, and the spot where he stood, skirted as it was by the Cuyahoga River on the west and by Lake Erie on the north, suggested to him that, with these natural advantages, the locality was destined, at no distant day, to become the site of a great commercial city.

In accordance with this impression, he directed the locality to be surveyed into city lots. It included an area of a mile square. Two surveys were made of the land under the superintendence of Augustus Porter—one by Seth Pease and the other by Amos Spafford. Each presented a separate map of his work. The one is known as "Pease's map," and the other as "Spafford's map." These original maps differ somewhat in detail, yet both are accepted as authoritative. The surveys were completed early in October, 1796. The surveyors gave to the new-born city the name of "Cleaveland," in honor of their chief. The general, with characteristic modesty, accepted the compliment.

The city, at its birth, contained three log cabins that had been erected by the surveyors for their own accommodation on the hillside next to the river, and near a spring that furnished an ample supply of pure water. The resident population that settled in Cleveland in 1796, was but four; in 1797 the population increased to fifteen; in 1800 it was reduced to seven by removals elsewhere, on account of the insalubrity of the locality. In 1820, the population increased to 150; and in 1830, at the taking of the first United States census, it was found that the population had advanced to 1075. At this time the Ohio Canal, with its terminus at Cleveland, had been constructed. This improvement so enlarged the facilities of commerce as to inspire confidence, and give assurance of the city's future prosperity. It was in 1830 that a newspaper called the Cleveland Advertiser was established. In preparing to issue the first number the editor discovered that the "heading" was too long to fit the "form," and so, in order to adjust it he dropped out the letter "a," in the first syllable of the word Cleaveland, and made it read "Cleveland." The public at once accepted this change in orthography.

It is indeed somewhat marvelous that the city of Cleveland from a sickly infancy, and within less than a century, has now grown to such gigantic proportions as to possess a population of nearly half a million. Its present rate of growth in population renders it impossible for any one, however much of a prophet he may be, to predict what will be the aggregate of its population a hundred years hence. It is said that when General Cleaveland founded the city, he predicted that the time would come when it would contain a population as large as that of old Windham in Connecticut, which at that time was about fifteen hundred. If the general could now see "what has come to pass," it would be interesting, if not amusing, to witness his expression of surprise.

Whatever else may be said of General Cleaveland, it is evident that he not only led an honorable life but achieved a great work. He was a man of few words and of prompt action. His morality was an outgrowth of puritanism and as rigid as it was pure. He was manly and dignified in his bearing, and so sedate in his looks that strangers often took him for a clergyman. In complexion he was somewhat swarthy, so much so that the Indians claimed him as akin to their own race. In personal appearance he was of medium height, erect, thick set and portly, had black hair, a quick, penetrating eye, muscular limbs, and a military air in his step, indicating that he was born to command. In the social circle he was pleasant and agreeable in his style of manners, and was always received as a welcome guest. He was a friend to everybody, and everybody seemed to be his friend. In his opinions he was decisive and could readily give a logical reason for them. He was also a man of true courage amid threatening dangers, and as shrewd in his tactics and management as he was courageous. In the midst of his usefulness and crowned with honors, he died at Canterbury, Conn., November 16, 1806, at the age of fifty-three years. He was the father of four children, Mary Esther, Francis Moses, Frances Augustus, and Julius Moses Cleaveland, three of whom survived him.

His was not only a career of unusual interest, but a mission that transformed a wilderness into a civilized land. In a word, his life-work commands our admiration, and deserves commemoration. The city that bears his name, and whose founder he was, could hardly do a more appropriate or graceful thing than to erect a statue to his memory as an expression of her appreciation of his character and public services, and thus by honoring him honor herself.

HARVEY RICE.

In connection with Mr. Rice's biography of General Moses Cleaveland elsewhere, the following hitherto unpublished document, commissioning him as captain of a company of sappers and miners in 1779, will be of special interest:

The United States of America in Congress assembled. To Moses Cleveland, Esquire, Greeting:

We, reposing especial trust and confidence in your patriotism, valor, conduct and fidelity, do by these presents constitute and appoint you to be a captain in the companies of sappers and miners in the Army of the United States, to take rank as such from the second day of August, 1779. You are, therefore, carefully and diligently to discharge the duty of a captain, by doing and performing all manner of things thereunto belonging. And we do strictly charge and require all officers and soldiers under your command to be obedient to your commands as captain. And you are to observe and follow such orders and directions from time to time as you shall receive from this or a future Congress of the United States, or committee of Congress for that purpose appointed, a committee of the States, or commander-in-chief for the time being of the Army of the United States, or any other superior officer, according to the rules and discipline of war, in pursuance of the trust reposed in you. This commission to continue in force until revoked by this or a future Congress, the committee of Congress before mentioned, or a committee of the States.

Entered in the war office, and examined by the board. Attest.

Witness: His Excellency Samuel Huntington, Esq., President of the Congress of the United States of America, at Philadelphia, the fourteenth day of February, 1780, and in the fourth year of our independence.

SAM. HUNTINGTON, President.

BEN. STODDERT, Secretary of the Board of War.

Captain Cleveland is hereby, at his own request, discharged from the service of the United States.

By His Excellency's command.

New Windsor, June 7, 1781. TEUCH TILGHMAN, Aid-de-Camp.

Dear Vikki,

I am enclosing my family group sheets - from Moses Cleveland to myself. I am also enclosing a copy of a manuscript my grandmother wrote about her family. I have sent several copies to members of the family, and it has been well received. In fact, her sister said it was so vivid that she relived the events just by reading about them. (My grandmother's grandmother was the last actual "Cleveland" in my line.)

You have to be incredibly busy with a project as big as the Clevelands, but if you ever find a minute, I'd love to hear your thoughts concerning your PAF program. I'm in the market for a different genealogy program, but can't find a written review of PAF. Are you planning to share information by disk or modem? That could influence my decision about which program to buy.

Sincerely,

Marsha
